WILSON INAUGURAL ATTACKS TARIFF

M'DEVITT CHARGES UNTRUE

The joint legislative committee on rules finds that the charges of attempted bribery, made by Senator John J. McDevitt of Quincy, are untrue.

The committee, in a 500-word report to the House this afternoon, found that "the statements of Senator McDevitt, both on the public platform at Quincy and before the committee, were untrue."

The committee exonerates Representative John H. Buckley of Dorchester.

The committee concludes its report with the following summary:

The issue as to the truth was clearly drawn between the accusation of Senator McDevitt and the denial of Representative Buckley, and in the absence of other evidence your committee has reached the conclusion that the statements of Senator McDevitt were so vague, so conflicting, so absolutely contradictory and inconsistent as to make all he has said seem t olie without foundation in fact and unworthy of any further consideration.

Your committee is compelled to conclude that the statements of Senator McDevitt, both on the public platform at Quincy and before the committee, were untrue.

The committee therefore report, recommending that the order before the committee, offered by Representative White of Newton, providing for the investigation of the charges, with the power to summons witnesses, be not adopted.

Never Talked with Buckley.

John J. Riley, the Court street real estate dealer and liquor license broker, testified this noon for less than one minute before the committee.

Asked by President Greenwood of the Senate, who is chairman of the joint rules committee, if he had anything to say, Riley said promptly:

Yes, I have two statements to make.

My first statement is that I never talked with John H. Buckley (Representative Buckley of Dorchester) about this matter.

My second statement is that I did talk with Mr. McDevitt about my bill.

I had talked with members of the Liquor Committee and had seen as many members of the Senate as possible.

I talked with Mr. McDevitt in the Senate lobby. I told him the good qualities of my bill and said I would like to have him with me on it. He said he would do whatever he could. That was all the conversation I had.

Riley Waited for Summons.

The joint rules committee went into executive session in room 355 at 12 o'clock. It was behind closed doors for about thirty-five minutes.

Then a call came for John J. Riley, who was mentioned before the committee yesterday in the indefinite term of "Riley." Riley was in the corridor. He knew his story was wanted by the committee. While waiting for the summons he said to reporters:

"I intend to tell the committee the whole truth as I know it. I've asked Senator

CONGRESS AFTER CAPITAL POLICE ON SUFFRAGE RIOT

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Major Sylvester, Superintendent of Police and all the commissioners will be put on the carpet by the Senate because of the riotous scenes which were permitted to occur yesterday in the course of the suffrage parade. Already three resolutions have been put into the Senate. Senator Nelson of Minnesota introduced one calling for a report as to why the resolution of Congress authorizing the stopping of traffic and the street cars on Pennsylvania avenue at the time of the parade had not been enforced. This resolution was promptly adopted by the Senate.

GOTHAM SUBWAY CONTRACTS SIGNED

NEW YORK, March 4.—The Public Service Commission today signed both the interborough subway contracts providing for the operation of the city's new subways being built at a cost of $250,000,000, and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit contract covering $149,000,000.

Portfolio of Labor Bill Is Signed by Taft

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The signing of the bill for the creation of the department of labor, thus providing for the tenth Cabinet member, and the clash between the President and the House over the sundry civil appropriation bill marked the closing hours of Congress today, which adjourned without date shortly after noon.

The sundry civil bill, carrying appropriations of $113,000,000, was vetoed by President Taft, who based his objection on a provision in the bill which makes an appropriation of $300,000 for the enforcement of the Sherman law, but which specifically exempts from prosecution labor organizations and associations of farmers.

The bill was passed over the executive veto, in the House, 256 to 60, but in the Senate the veto was sustained.

The rivers and harbors bill carrying over $100,000,000 and the public buildings bills were signed by the President during his last few moments of power.

A few moments before noon the President signed the naval bill, providing for one battleship, and the postoffice appropriation bill.

The House agreed to the conference report on the general deficiency bill.

BROWN OF MEXICO TO SEE WILSON

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—E. N. Brown, president of the National Railways, will go tonight for Washington to confer with President Wilson in connection with the Mexican situation. Intense interest is aroused here today over the inauguration of Wilson. The Mexican press anxiously awaited the announcement of his policy toward Mexico.

JOLO UNDER SIEGE BY MORO OUTLAWS

MANILA, March 4.—Thirty-two wounded scouts arrived here today from Jolo, one hundreds of armed Moro outlaws have town virtually in a State of siege. At Jolo, it is reported are taunting American soldiers who are defending it by shouting: "Come out and fight like Americans, not like pigs."

CASTRO SITS 100 FEET FROM WILSON

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Sitting a hundred feet from President Wilson, General Cipriano Castro, "dictator of Venezuela," who caused admission to this country despite the efforts of the federal government, viewed the inauguration ceremonies today after making a two-day trip from Havana. His presence in the court of honor stand was in on way at the invitation of President Wilson. Castro is ostensibly here to cultivate the friendship of the Democratic administration. President Wilson so far has ignored him.

INDICT WHITE STAR LINE.

The Federal Grand Jury today indicted the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company, known as the White Star line, for alleged violation of the immigration laws.

Wilson to Name Cabinet Advisers This Afternoon

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Before leaving the Hotel Shoreham this forenoon President-elect Wilson came out to see the newspaper correspondents: "Gentlemen," he said, "I have nothing to say until 12 o'clock." The President-elect was asked when he would announce his Cabinet.

"I am informed that the Senate sits this afternoon. The Cabinet will be sent in then."

Mr. Wilson was asked if he would send in any diplomatic appointments.

"I don't expect to send any other names except the Cabinet today."

"Will you send in nine or ten Cabinet nominations?"

"That depends upon whether the President signs the bill creating a labor department. I am all ready for the tenth appointment—on a hair trigger."

"You won't have to wait long now to know definitely," said William Jennings Bryan early today in reference to his reported selection for the State portfolio. Mr. Bryan's eyes twinkled when he said this and his smile was at its broadest.

RECORD CROWD AT THE INAUGURATION

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey became the President of the United States at exactly 1:36 this afternoon.

Previous to the induction of the President-elect into office, Thomas Riley Marshall of Indiana, Vice-President-elect, took the oath of office at 12:42 p. m. in the Senate chamber.

The journey of President-elect Wilson early today from his hotel to the Whit House and thence to the capitol was a triumphant procession, attended by the applause of the argest gathering of visitors ever assembled in Washington to witness an inauguration.

It was estimated that 325,000 persons lined Pennsylvania avenue to greet the new President on his way to the capitol to take his oath of office.

25,000 SEE CEREMONY OUTSIDE CAPITOL.

The actual inauguration ceremony was staged just outside the east portico of the Capitol before nearly 25,000 spectators, who packed grandstand and plaza and cheered the new President to the echo. Warm weather and a slightly clouded sky prevailed.

Following his inaugural address, Vice-President Marshall swore twenty-seven Senators into office.

The oath of office was delivered to President Wilson by the chief justice of the United States, Edward Douglas White, and to Vice-President Marshall by the president pro tem of the Senate, Jacob H. Gallinger, of New Hampshire.

Each kissed the Bible, sealing his promise to support the constitution and laws of the country. To entire ceremony, including the administration of the presidential, vice presidential and senatorial oaths and the, delivery of the inaugural addresses of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Marshall was performed in a little over sixty minutes.

Wilson Has Crowd Moved Up.

There was a slight delay while President Wilson instructed Major General Leonard Wood to remove battalions of West Point cadets and Annapolis midshipmen who were holding the crowds in check, over a hundred yards away.

President Wilson said he wanted the crowds near the rostrum so that they could hear what he had to say.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, President Wilson, together with former President Taft and their distinguished guests, retired to the Capitol, emerging a few minutes later to enter the presidential carriage and return to the White House.

They were escorted by a detachment of local police in charge of Major Richard Sylvester. The party preceded the inauguration parade of 40,000 soldiers, veterans and civic marchers.

They were greeted everywhere with roars of applause from the people who lined the streets.

Mrs. Wilson Gowned in Gray.

For two hours before the actual ceremonies began, the Senate galleries were were crowded to overflowing with women

Mrs. Marshall, wife of the new Vice-President, clad in a dark blue dress, entered the executive gallery shortly before 12 o'clock. Fifteen minutes later, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and her three daughters took seats in the front row. They were surrounded by a brilliant company of diplomats, government officials and officers of the army and navy.

The future mistress of the White House was dressed in gray. Miss Jessie Wilson wore a white and blue gown and Eleanor and Margaret Wilson were garbed in blue. As she took her seat Mrs. Wilson smiled at Mrs. Marshall.

Following the administration of the oath of office to Mr. Marshall, the presidential party walked to the inauguration stand in front of the east portico of the Capitol.

Parade Forms Early.

As early as 8 o'clock the marchers in the inaugural parade began to form about the Capitol. The early hint of rain presaged by leaden skies gave away to a falsity shining sun as their formation neared completion. The parade's completion was almost complete when the inaugural ceremonies were ended.

Banners were flying, flags were waving, bands were playing, and every building on both sides of the famous highway was brilliantly decorated.

Following the President's carriage, came the inaugural pageant parade, in four main divisions. The first division was composed of regulars of the army and navy, the second of State militia and military schools; the third of patriotic organizations and the fourth of civic and political clubs.

Halt for Luncheon.

When the President reached the White House there was a half-hour halt in the line while the luncheon arranged for by Mr. and Mrs. Taft was served. To this luncheon, beside the new President and Mrs. Wilson, were bidden the Vice-President and Mrs. Marshall, the members of the committee on arrangements, the members of the Democratic National Committee, William Corcoran Eustis, chairman of the local committee, and half a hundred or more others, either personal friends or closely connected with the inaugural ceremonies.

The luncheon was quickly over, for the President had to review from the huge

PRESIDENT WILSON OUTLINES POLICIES IN HIS INAUGURAL

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered, and here are some of the chief items:

A tariff cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests.

A banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the government to sell its bonds fifty years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits.

An industrial system which, take it on all sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the opportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country.

A body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs.

Watercourses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine.—From inaugural address of President Wilson.

NEW CABINET MEMBERS IN RESERVED SEATS.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Seated this noon in space reserved for the Wilson cabinet in the Senate chamber were Messrs. Bryan, Lane, Houston, Redfield, McAdoo, Garrison and Daniels. Absentees of the suggested cabinet were Postmaster-General Wilson, who had admitted according the new administration of labor, and Messrs. McReynolds and Burleson.

New President, in Speech to Vast Crowd at the Capitol, Outlines a Broad, Constructive Policy, and Asks All Good Citizens to Aid Him in His Efforts.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A broad, constructive political policy during his administration of the affairs of the United States was pledged to the people by President Woodrow Wilson, sworn in today as the twenty-eighth President of the United States, in his inaugural address, which he closed with an appeal to all patriotic men, irrespective of party, to aid him in carrying out that policy.

"We shall restore, not destroy," said the President in summing up his proposed alterations in legislative, governmental and industrial affairs. The address follows:

PRESIDENT WILSON'S ADDRESS.

There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the House of Representatives became Democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The Senate about to assemble will also be Democratic. The offices of President and Vice-President, have been put into the hands of Democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds today. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except when the nation is using that party for a large and definite purpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the nation now seeks to use the Democratic party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view.

Some old things with which we had grown familiar, and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives, have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them, with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister.

Some new things, as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions. We have been refreshed by a new insight into our own life.

We see in many things that life is very great. It is incomparably great in its material aspects, in its body of wealth, in the diversity and sweep of its energy, in the industries which have been conceived and built up by the genius of individual men and the limitless enterprise of groups of men. It is great, also, very great, in its moral forces. Nowhere else in the world have noble men and women exhibited in more striking forms the beauty and the energy of sympathy and helpfulness and counsel in their efforts to rectify wrong, alleviate suffering, and set the weak in the way of strength and hope.

Have Not Stopped to Count Human Cost

We have built up, moreover, a great system of government, which has stood through a long age as in many respects a model for those who seek to set liberty upon foundations that will endure against fortuitous change, against storm and accident. Our life contains every great thing, and contains it in rich abundance.

But the evil has come with the good, and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexcusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used, and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature, without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scorning to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient.

We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through.

The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. With the great government went many deep secret things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great government we loved has too often been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people.

At last a vision has been vouchsafed us of our life as a whole. We see the bad with the good, the debased and degraded with the sound and vital. With this vision we approach new affairs.

Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good, to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it. There has been something crude and heartless and unfeeling in our haste to succeed and be great.

Our Work Is a Work of Restoration

Our thought has been "Let every man look out for himself, let every generation look out for itself," while we reared giant machinery which made it impossible that any but those who stood at the levers of control should have a chance to look out for themselves. We had not forgotten our morals. We remembered well enough that we had set up a policy which was meant to serve the humblest as well as the most powerful, with an eye single to the standards of justice and fair play, and remembered it with pride. But we were very heedless and in a hurry to be great.

We have come now to the sober second thought. The scales of heedlessness have fallen from our eyes. We have made up our minds to square every process of our national life again with the standards we so proudly set up at the beginning and have always carried at our hearts. Our work is a work of restoration.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered, and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the government to sell its bonds fifty years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the opportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs; watercourses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine.

We have studied as perhaps no other nation has the most effective means of production, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should either as organizers of industry, as statesmen, or as individuals.

Government's Basis Is Justice, Not Pity

Nor have we studied and perfected the means, by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and its women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence.

This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control, or singly cope with.

Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do, and not leave the others undone, the old-fashioned, never-to-be-neglected, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual right.

This is the high enterprise of the new day; to lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearthfire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable that we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste.

We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon; and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self-satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whither they cannot tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto.

Nation Stirred by Solemn Passion

And yet it will by no cool process of mere science. The nation has been deeply stirred, stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heart-strings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and the brother are one.

We know our task to be no mere task of politics but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here muster not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do.

Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try?

I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side.

God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

300,000 JAM CAPITAL TO SEE INAUGURATION

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Three hundred thousand strong, the largest crowd in the history of Washington inaugurals, thronged the streets today to watch the ceremonial attendant upon the induction of a new President into office.

Seemingly every Democrat who had starved through sixteen long years of Republican supremacy had bought himself a ticket to the capital and was on the streets today determined to greet the triumph of his political faith with appropriate noise and enthusiasm.

Slouch-hatted rail-splitters from south of the Mason and Dixon line, tanned westerners, smug citizens from the prosperous Middle West and dapper visitors from the Eastern States rubbed shoulders in the inauguration throngs.

The centre of interest for the early crowds were the Capitol and the Shoreham Hotel, where President-elect Wilson and Vice-President-elect Marshall were breakfasting. There the visitors swarmed over the streets and grandstands in ever-thickening masses, cheering lustily the appearance of every visitor who even bore a semblance to fame.

The thin lines of spectators along the line of march, however, soon thickened to a pushing, crowding throng, which, good-naturedly, endeavored to secure a good place from which to view the passage of the President-elect and his escort and their return at the head of the inaugural parade.

Those who had been thoughtful or lavish enough to purchase grandstand seats at the exorbitant prices demanded by the speculators were the last to take their places. They were pushed about by late comers who had been obliged to walk to the scene of the ceremonial by the suspension of all street car lines within the zone of the parade.

The whole scene resembled nothing more than a huge carnival throng, intent upon admiring the decorations that made gay the front of the buildings and the thousands of pretty women who surged through the crowds decorated with sashes and ribbons bearing every sort of inscription from "Votes for women" to "Kiss me I'm lonely."

Rowdyism, such as marked the parade of the suffragists, was little in evidence.

As early as 7 o'clock the more ambitious of the sightseers were on the streets and by 8 o'clock the first thin line of spectators was stretched along the ropes which guarded the line of march of the presidential party from the White House to the Capitol and return.

BRYAN TIRES OF WAITING, VISITS WILSON

WASHINGTON, March 4.—William Jennings Bryan, after repeated efforts all day yesterday to get an audience with President-elect Wilson, took the bull by the horns early today and went to the Shoreham Hotel unannounced and unexpected and attempted to get into the suite of rooms of the President-elect. He arrived at 9:15. It happened, however, that National Chairman McCombs had preceded him by 15 minutes, and was already in conference with Mr. Wilson.

The President-elect came to the door, exchanged a few brief words with the Nebraskan and Colonel Bryan came out immediately.

In an apologetic tone, he undertook to explain to the newspapermen that his visit was one of merely courtesy.

"I tried to get the President-elect on the telephone two or three times yesterday, but he was busy all, day, and I could not make connections with him. So I came this morning merely to say hello, and to pay my respects."

Mr. Bryan had been brought over by Colonel Thomas H. Birch, who was also to Mr. Wilson as Governor of New Jersey, and who will be aide to Major-General Leonard Wood as marshal of the parade today. Mr. McCombs remained with the President-elect until 9:30.

HOW TAFT SPENT HIS LAST HOURS AS CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF NATION

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Although he did not complete the signing of the last of the thousand or more commissions passed by the Senate yesterday until 3 a. m. today, President Taft arose at 7 o'clock today and directed the last part of the packing of his personal belongings.

Immediately after breakfast the President visited for the last time his office in the executive wing of the White House, where he attended to a last few bits of business, among them the transmission to Congress of the MacVeagh plan for the reorganization of the customs service.

Then he returned to the White House to await the arrival of the President-elect and Vice-President-elect. Joseph P. Tumulty, President Wilson's private secretary, was the first of the new administration to arrive. He arrived at 9:35 o'clock, and was soon followed by the President-elect and Vice-President-elect.

They were received formally by the President and Mrs. Taft, the latter of whom said goodby to the incoming chief executive. President Taft and the President-elect followed by Vice-President-elect Marshall and escorted by the Keney troop, the Black Horse troop from Fort Myer and a detachment of the Culver cadets then left for the capitol. President Taft being seated on the right of the President-elect.

BRILLIANT WOMEN IN THE NEW ADMINISTRATION

Mrs. Wilson, Once a Radiant Beauty of the South, a Most Accomplished "First Lady of the Land, and Also a Good Cook.

The new mistress of the White House, Mrs Woodrow Wilson, nee Ellen Louise Axson, was married to President Wilson at Savannah, Ga., on June 24, 1885. She was a radiant beauty of the South at the time and was extremely popular in Rome, Ga., the city of her birth.

The year of the Wilson-Axson union synchronized with Mr. Wilson's acceptance of a professorship in Bryn Mawr College, where, as the wife of the young educator, Mrs. Wilson attracted much attention by reason of her ready wit and her faculty for charming entertainment. She has large brown eyes, her features are small and regular, and her head is crowned with a wealth of waving brown hair.

The Wilsons' three daughters, Margaret Woodrow, the eldest; Jessie Woodrow and Eleanor Randolph, the youngest, though bound by the closest ties of sisterly affection, each have a distinctive bent.

What the Girls Do.

Margaret possesses a good singing voice and is a close student of music.

Jessie is an enthusiast on sociology and has become greatly beloved in the mill district of Kensington, outside Philadelphia, where she has been doing settlement work ever since her graduation from the Woman's College of Baltimore.

Eleanor inherits her mother's gift for painting.

All three of the Wilson girls are accomplished linguists.

Mrs. Wilson springs from a line of Presbyterian preachers and has real Southern "blue stocking" blood in her veins. Her paternal grandfather was a distinguished clergyman in Savannah, and her maternal grandfather was the Rev. Nathan Hoyt, for many years pastor of the Presbyterian church in Athens, Ga. Her father was the Rev. Edward Axson of Rome, Ga., where young Wilson went a-courting.

Few Close Relatives.

The only close relatives of Mrs. Wilson living are the children of Randolph Axson, her father's brother, and today B. Palmer Axson is the only one living in Savannah Randolph K. Axson, another son, and the Meadamore Lelia and Carrie, Belle Axson live in Atlanta. Mrs. Legare Walker, who bore the same maiden name as Mrs. Wilson (Ellen Louise Axson), lives in Summerville, S. C. Mrs. Randolph Axson, Sr., was a Miss Law, a sister of Mrs. Charles Edgerton of Savannah and the late Mrs. Thomas C. Clay.

An account of the marriage of Miss Axson and Woodrow Wilson was given in the Savannah, Ga., Morning News of Thursday, June 25, 1885. In those days there was no society column and the notice, which is just twelve lines long, was run in the space devoted to local news. It reads as follows:

Miss Ellie Lou (Ellen Louise) Axson, daughter of the late Rev. Edward Axson of this city, and Mr. Wilson, son of the Rev. J. R. Wilson of Wilmington, S. C., were married last evening at the residence of the Rev. I. S. K. Axson, pastor of the Independent Presbyterian Church.

The ceremony was performed by the bridegroom's father and the bride's grandfather. The nuptials were celebrated quietly, only the intimate friends and relatives of the contracting parties being present.

Mrs. Wilson Good Painter.

After her marriage, Mrs. Wilson divided her time between her household duties and a love for painting, which had been developed at the Art Students' League in New York city. Following this hobby, she showed remarkable skill, producing several canvases which later gained her exhibition in New York and elsewhere. Some of her landscapes were sold recently and it has been predicted that were "The First Lady of the Land" to devote her whole attention to painting she would soon occupy a very high place among the women artists of America.

Domestic science held even a higher place in Mrs. Wilson's curriculum of early girlhood. She had been taught a great deal about food preparation at her home in Rome, Ga., but after her marriage to the young metropolitan she went in for cooking on scientific principles. With this end in view, the wife of the new President undertook a course in cooking and general management of the home, under Mrs. Rorer, in Philadelphia.

Like Southern Cooking.

Mrs. Wilson, in the line of housekeeping, has prompted a distinctly Southern scheme of food preparation. Both she and Mr. Wilson are very fond of the cooking of the South, and since his marriage Mr. Wilson has thrived upon this diet.

The ideal dinner, a la Wilson, is as follows:

Chicken, Southern style.
Rice.
Candied sweet potatoes.
White beans.
Corn.
Fruit.
Salad.

So great was Mrs. Wilson's interest in her home that art was allowed to lapse into comparative oblivion until about eight years ago, when her daughters began to attain maturity. The Wilson girls, aside from their distinctive beauty, have been taught to foster a great affection for a active, out-of-door life. They excel in horseback riding, in golf, tennis, dancing and swimming.

Not Avowed Suffragist.

While not an avowed suffragist, Mrs. Wilson thoroughly believes that a higher destiny awaits women.

"The tireless energy of the twentieth century woman," says she, "is wonderful to behold. It is the manifestation of the awakening of American womanhood—a spirit that is destined to help us maintain ourselves in the vanguard of civilization. I am a great believer in the intellect, strength of character and optimism of the American woman."

The induction of her husband into office brought Mrs. Wilson face to face with problems as perplexing as any Mr. Wilson will be called upon to solve during his administration.

Mrs. Wilson, of course, will have nothing to do with the solution of such intricate propositions as the readjustment of the tariff, or the peaceful settlement of the Mexican imbroglio, but as "The First Lady in the Land" she will have to cope with the question of social Washington, the selection of proper aides and the establishment of a scheme of entertainment which shall set the pace for the elite.

Little Known at Capital.

The wife of the new President comes to Washington known to comparatively few Washington official women, among whom are Mrs. James E. Martine, wife of the Senator from New Jersey; Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, wife of Senator Gore of Oklahoma, and Mrs. Albert S. Burleson of Alabama. Her position, therefore is that of one who must sift and refine the mass of Democratic newcomers to the capital, and select her social cabinet much after the manner followed by her husband in recruiting his political aides.

Mrs. Wilson Gets $35,000 Yearly for White House Care

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The White House, over which Mrs. Woodrow Wilson today becomes mistress, is as splendid as any palace. Today she finds it safe and span as the result of the cleaning given it by the Taft housecleaning force. Everything is as fine and orderly as a great system could make it.

Congress appropriates each year $35,000 for the care and furnishing of the executive mansion. While Presidents' wives order some changes to keep abreast of the times, and to renew any scratched or damaged furniture, much of the china in the place comes from its furniture and silver dating back to the earliest Presidents.

Some of the show furnishings of the White House are: A "gold" grand piano, valued at $22,000; two wonderful blue Sevres vases, valued at $5,000 each, old portraits of priceless value, including one of Martha Washington; chandeliers containing 3,000 pieces of crystal; carpets and draperies of great value and purity, and several sets of chinaware containing 1,500 pieces.

Marble and cold leaf combined with the richest materials in furnishings make the White House a fitting home for the nation's Chief Executive.

Mrs. Wilson's Parade Dress of Tan Cloth

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Following is a description of the gowns to be worn by the women in the Presidential parade at the inaugural ceremonies.

Mrs. Wilson—Tan cloth dress, trimmed with golden brown ribbons; silk coat of same material; small hat, with trimmings in same shade.

Miss Margaret Wilson—Blue silk poplin dress; silk poplin coat of the same shade; hat of blue velvet feathers and embroidered ribbons.

Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson—Lavender broadcloth dress trimmed with silk and chiffon, with lace collar; small hat of silk and velvet, with shaded feathers.

Miss Eleanor Wilson—Bright blue cloth dress with silk brocade coat; hat of blue straw with roses in shades of orange.

Miss Helen Woodrow Bones—Gray corded dress; gray hat, with red feather.

Mrs. Annie Howe—Black charmeuse dress, coat of black poplin, hat of black straw, with shaded blue and gray plumes.

Mrs. Perrie Cothran—Green charmeuse dress, coat shaded in same tones, hat of black straw, with shaded plumes of rose and taupe.

TWO pictures of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the new "First Lady of the Land," showing her as she looked when as a Savannah belle she was being wooed by the future President, twenty-nine years ago, and as she looks today. The picture taken in 1884 was made by Kimball of Concord, N. H., while Mrs. Wilson, then Miss Axson, was visiting a girlhood friend there.

PROUD OF THE WOMEN, SAYS NELLIE BLY.

By NELLIE BLY.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Can you imagine it? Ten thousand women in line? They say that was the number by actual count. I believe there were more.

Picture, if you can, an endless chain of butterflies divided into sections according to color. Imagine 10,000 of these beautiful dreams of color fluttering along, and it will give a little inkling of the magnificent procession of the exquisite parade which made history.

You will see all the pictures and read descriptions of the floats and I won't attempt to tell you about that. I did you can't be in a parade and tell anything about it except your own little space. The crowd was unmanageable and much will be written of the bunglesome of the spectators. The police were powerless. The same thing occurred in New York on the first parade. A complaint to the authorities has brought better treatment, the second time.

Badly Handled by the Men.

The parade ended at Continental Hall and as usual when men had the management the affair was badly handled. There are three large doors leading to the vestibule. By some strange occurrence only one could be forced open and the great mass of women had to pass almost single file to get into the building at 11. It was worth while inside, however. It was beautiful. Dr. Anna Shaw presided at the meeting and Mrs. Catt and Mary Johnson, the writer spoke.

Where is the man who can match Mrs. Judith Smith of Boone? Mrs. Smith came to Washington to be in the parade. She made a brief speech in which she said she had worked for the cause for sixty years. Mrs. Smith is not afraid to tell her age. A woman, too. She said the way to keep young was to engage in an interesting and absorbing fight. Mrs. Smith is ninety-two years old. Now Mr. Man's voter bring on your active ninety-two year-old fighters.

Proud of the Women.

If Mrs. Emily Blackstone of New York told me once I did not hear it but she was introduced as the next oldest member and worker.

The press was thanked for its splendid support. I tell you our women are appreciative. Then the men who marched were thanked and three cheers were given for them.

I never was so proud of women; I never was so impressed with their ability; I never so realized their determination and sincerity; I am glad I am one.

Society Women Wash Their Own Hair

"Home shampooing among society women is rapidly gaining in popularity," says Mae Martyn, writing for the San Francisco Bee. "This is not a fad or fancy, but rather because splendid results are attained in this manner, through the use of canthrox.

"If you would have luxuriant growth of glossy hair, try this easy way of shampooing. Dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a teacup of hot water, then pour on the scalp and rub vigorously for a few minutes, after which the hair and scalp should be rinsed carefully. When the hair is dry you will be delighted with its fluffy, glossy condition.

"While canthrox is not expensive, you should be careful to get it in an original package."

CABINET WIVES NEW ASSETS IN CAPITAL LIFE

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Mrs. Franklin Knight Lane, as the wife of the latest State Commerce Commissioner, has won for herself a niche in the social halls of Washington and will make an ideal Cabinet lady. Mrs. Lane is a well posed and intellectual woman, has a distinguished appearance and dresses in exquisite taste.

The Lanes are not spectacular entertainers, but their home is frequently the scene of enjoyable dinner parties and receptions. Mrs. Lane is devoted to Californians and has gathered around her a delightful little clique of people from the Golden Gate city. On account of so many California army and navy people residing in Washington, the Lanes have become very fond of service and are popular also in the resident section of Washington.

Mrs. Lane before her marriage was Anna Wintermute of Tacoma, Washington.

Mrs. William Bauchop Wilson, the wife of the newly appointed secretary of labor, is above all, a mother.

During her husband's service in Congress she had preferred to remain in her home in Pittsburgh, Pa., looking after nine children. Her eldest daughter, Agnes, has acted at chatelaine for her father here.

Agnes Wilson, Worker.

Mrs. Wilson was born in Glasgow, Scotland. Her father, Hugh Williamson, came to America with his wife and family in 1872 and settled in Arnot, Pa. The Williams have a beautiful country estate at Blossburg, Pa. Miss Agnes Hart Wilson, the eldest daughter, is one of the most interesting girls of the coming set. When sixteen years old she was her father's private secretary, he being secretary of the United Mine Workers of America. She is at present clerk of the Committee of Labor of the House of Representatives. In 1905, the American Federation of Labor gave her a gold watch studded with diamonds, as an appreciation of special work for labor.

Mrs. William C. Redfield, the wife of the Secretary of Commerce, was Miss Elsie Mercine Fuller, daughter of the late Henry Purdee Fuller, a banker of Brooklyn. Mrs. Redfield spent her girlhood in Brooklyn and met her husband there. They were married on April 18, 1885.

Mr. and Mrs. Redfield have two children. Their eldest is Mrs. Charles H. Drury of Montreal, Canada. Their son, Humphrey Fuller Redfield, is a student at Amherst College.

Mrs. Redfield takes an active interest in questions of the day and political matters in which her husband is interested. She is very domestic in her tastes.

Mrs. Burleson an Author.

One of the intellectual and popular women of the Congressional set is Mrs. Albert Sidney Burleson. Well acquainted with every phase of official Washington, she has become identified with many literary societies in Washington, and is particularly interested in philanthropic work. She is an advocate of woman suffrage.

Before her marriage in 1905 to the then young lawyer, Mrs. Burleson was Miss Adele Steiner of Austin, Tex. Mrs. Burleson has made a reputation as a short story writer, a writer on philanthropic subjects and a playwright. She is author of the one-act play, "The Senator's Secretary."

The three Burleson girls follow their mother's aptitude for literature. Miss Laura Burleson is now Mrs. Richardson Van Wick Wesley of San Antonio, Tex. The other two daughters, Misses Lucy and Miss Sidney, are still schoolgirls.

WOMEN'S MARCH TO INDIANA CAPITOL SCORES VICTORY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 4.—The march to the State house of over 600 women who swarmed to the floor of the Senate and argued their cause with correspondents was the fight for the introduction of a joint resolution to amend the State Constitution to grant women full suffrage.

Though the Senate the women went into the House and there stopped the proceedings while they made their pleas. Here, too, they were given a hearing than in the upper house, for but little attention was paid to them.

WILSON BIRTHPLACE SHRINE OF PILGRIMS

STAUNTON, Va., March 4.—Major Carter H. Harrison and the Democratic Club, from the city of Cook County, Illinois, en route to take part in the inaugural pageant, were escorted to President-elect Wilson's birthplace, where addresses were made, when they stopped off here.

PAST FIFTY? YOU NEED "CASCARETS"
What glasses are to weak eyes, Cascarets are to weak bowels
—Try a 10-Cent box.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less elastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important as at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets, and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

325,000 JOIN IN DEMONSTRATION AT WILSON'S INAUGURAL

RECORD THRONG FILLS CAPITAL TO CELEBRATE DEMOCRACY'S BIG DAY.

grand stand in front of the White House the long line of marchers. The parade took about four hours to pass the Presidential stand.

For a time Ex-President Taft stood beside his successor, but he soon left, in order to catch the train for Augusta, where he will spend a few weeks resting before taking up his new duties at Yale University.

First Since Cleveland.

It has been two decades since a Democrat, the late Grover Cleveland, appeared in the same role that Woodrow Wilson assumed today, and it was not strange, therefore, that the enthusiasm of these partisans which has had no occasion for expression during this long period should have burst forth in spontaneous manifestations.

Mr. Wilson and Vice-President-elect Marshall had breakfast together shortly after 9 o'clock at the Shoreham. Immediately afterward the incoming heads of the government met a number of Governors and prominent Democratic politicians, headed by William Jennings Bryan.

The greeting between Bryan and Wilson was cordial. "A cloudy day is not an ill omen," said Bryan as they shook hands. President-elect Wilson smiled, but made no reply.

Promptly at 9:42 a. m. the Congressional committees on arrangements waited upon the President-elect and escorted him to the White House, where President Taft was ready to accompany him on the ride down historic Pennsylvania avenue to the Capitol. The streets were densely thronged with people, who cheered lustily as the official carriage moved rapidly along the thoroughfare. President Taft sat upon the right side of the carriage and President-elect Wilson upon the left.

A mounted guard of Essex County, N. J., troopers acted as escort of honor.

The party left the White House at 10:17, reaching the Capitol at 10:54.

Committee Escorts Marshall.

In the meantime another committee had waited upon Vice-President-elect Thomas R. Marshall at the Shoreham Hotel, where he is to make his home for the next four years, and escorted him to the Capitol. Also, members of the reception committee, including a number of women, accompanied Mrs. Wilson and her daughters and Mrs. Marshall, together with their women friends to the Capitol, where they were seated in the galleries, especially reserved for them in the Senate Chamber.

At 12:35 o'clock President-elect Wilson, with President Taft walking by his side and followed by members of the retiring cabinet and the members of the committee on arrangements, was escorted into the chamber. The retiring and the incoming Presidents occupied chairs immediately in front of the Vice-President's rostrum. At their right, in brilliant uniforms embroidered with silk and gold and wearing many insignias, sat the members of the diplomatic corps, the ambassadors and ministers plenipotentiary representing every civilized nation on the globe.

Last to enter was Thomas Riley Marshall, escorted by a committee of Senators. President pro tem. Gallinger extended his hand and then administered the oath of office to the man who is to be the president of the Senate for the next four years. The new Vice-President at once assumed the gavel and after a brief address, administered the oath of office to those Senators who have been elected for the third term of six years, beginning March 4, 1913. This was necessary at this time for the reason that the United States Senate is a continuing body, and must be organized at all times.

The swearing in of new Senators completed the ceremonies in the Senate chamber.

Then began the solemn and impressive procession of dignitaries from the chamber to the open plaza. Etiquette fixed the order which was followed. As the different bodies retired in the order of their entrance, they were formally announced.

Cheer Upon Cheer Arises.

The appearance of the President-elect upon the portico of the Capitol was the signal for round after round of cheers from the thousands who stood in the broad plaza in front of the Capitol. The shouts continued while the inaugural party were taking seats on the platform.

A hush fell over the vast throng as the solemn Chief Justice arose and standing before the President-elect administered the oath prescribed by the Constitution. For that moment Woodrow Wilson ceased to be President-elect and became President, and William Howard Taft became an ex-President.

The oath itself was short in extreme. It follows:

I hereby solemnly swear (or affirm) I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.

When the opened book was held up by the clerk of the Supreme Court, the Chief Justice placed his hand upon one side and the President-elect on the other. The clerk then raised the open volume to the President to be kissed and the verse and chapter his lips chance to touch were carefully observed.

After the ceremony the clerk marked the passage. He also inscribed the form of the oath taken by the President on the fly leaf of the volume. The Bible will be presented to the mistress of the White House by the wife or daughter of the clerk.

The presidential succession in itself was simple in character, but a great deal of the spectacular was added to it. The audience cheered lustily again and continued until the new President advanced to the front of the platform upon which it was arranged that he should deliver his inaugural address.

"I Summon All Honest Men to Sustain Me," Says Wilson

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here muster not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do.

Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try?

I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side.

God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

—The peroration of President Woodrow Wilson's inaugural address.

VICE-PRESIDENT MARSHALL'S ADDRESS BEFORE THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, March 4. — Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall, in taking the oath in the Senate chamber today, said in part:

To my mind, government is the harness with which a people draws its load of civilization. If the harness be properly adjusted the load, though heavy, will be drawn with ease and no part of the people will be galled. The Senate is the blinders, intended to keep the people from shying at imaginary dangers and toppling into the ditch our system of government. So long as the blinders serve this purpose they are a most valuable part of the harness, but if they be drawn so closely to the eyes as to prevent the seeing of real dangers, then they should either be spread or stone away with entirely. I am one of those who think that we can so adjust our blinders as to meet new conditions and render us surely responsive to every reasonable demand of the people without disturbing any of the checks and balances of our system of government and preserving with loyalty and fidelity the sacred ideals of the Republic.

Guardian of People's Honor.

With neither right nor desire to infringe upon the prerogatives of the President so soon to be, I beg the expression of the opinion that whatever diverse views may be held relative to the work of this body, all persons are agreed that under the Constitution the Senate of the United States is singularly the guardian of the people's honor; that more and more, as righteousness is exalted among this people, the idea is becoming more firmly fixed that is is not vast territory, great wealth nor large teeming wealth mark the real status of America; that America is to be measured by the quality of its manhood; and, as the idea in her formation was the inherent right of men to govern themselves, that now she can ill afford to announce this doctrine in her own land and renounce it for an instrument of oppression in other lands.

Unfortunately there is no fixed standard of honor outside the dictionary. The gambler may hold it no conviction in paying his gaming debts, the member of the smart set in divorcing his neighbor's wife before taking her for himself, the Senator in eliminating personalities. But when we enter the chancelleries of the world and submit to their judgments, not only our right to be, but our right to be respected, we can hope to be measured in but one way; and we must be able to show that the solemn treaty obligations of this republic will be kept with the same scrupulous honesty, both of spirit and letter, whether made with the humblest people of this continent struggling for self-government or with the mightiest monarch of the Old World. This high sense of honor constitutes the panoply of the American people. Armies and battleships furnish no substitute for it. These are valuable, but the people never intended that authority should vest them as accessories to a brigand's kit.

A Plea for Peace.

If anyone in the name of the American people, either in violation of treaty obligations or the manifest purpose of the Monroe doctrine, has taken aught while this body was deliberating, it is poor duty to ascertain all facts thereto. And if wrong or injustice has been done, even to the humblest republic, let this people be brave enough and strong enough to make reparation. The real greatness of this republic rests upon its unsullied honor, and it is the duty of this body to search down rumors of bad faith and righteously make right wrong wherever wrong is discovered.

Here, in this most sacred spot, where war has been made and peace declared, here in the presence of the distinguished representatives of the governments of the civilized world, here, within the hearing of the beauty, culture and ripened statecraft of his own land, may one humble American express the hope before he enters upon a four years' silence that all our diplomacy may spell peace with all peoples, justice for all governments and righteousness the world around.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR WALSH SENDS MESSAGE TO PRESIDENT WILSON

Acting-Governor David I. Walsh, Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts, today sent the following telegram to President Wilson:

State House, Boston, March 4, 1913.

Hon. Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

The people of Massachusetts join with their Governor and military and civil representatives in Washington in extending cordial greetings to you today upon your inauguration as the twenty-eighth President of the United States, and pledge their loyal co-operation, irrespective of political affiliations, in your every effort for the prosperity and happiness of all the people.

FOSS LEADS TROOPS AT CAPITAL; MEETS BIRD ON TRAIN FOR WASHINGTON

By ELIAS McQUAID.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Governor Foss had no sooner stepped from his train in the Union Station today than he began talking about getting away again. If he can, the Governor will be out of Washington in time to leave New York on the "Midnight" and be back in Boston in time for the Wednesday meeting of the legislative council.

The Governor's travelling companions were Adjutant General Gardner Pearson and State Senator Frank X. Quigley.

Senator Quigley expects to go back with the Bay State legislature.

An interesting incident of the Foss trip to Washington was the first meeting of Governor Foss and Charles Sumner Bird of Walpole, last Fall's—and probably next Fall's—Progressive candidate for Governor of Massachusetts.

Mr. and Mrs. Bird were passengers on the same train out of Boston with the Governor and his friends. They were in the same car and Mr. Bird shortly made himself known. The Governor was very glad to meet him. Later on, it happened that the Governor and Mr. and Mrs. Bird were assigned to the same table in the dining car.

"Meeting them," says the Governor, "was worth the journey to Washington. I regretted that I had not formed the acquaintance earlier.

Folks who saw the Governor before he left Massachusetts brigade headquarters to hurry to the capitol exercises found him looking remarkably fine, even his execrable beauty set off by a gorgeous purple tie, but apparently sober-minded, not to say worried, about something.

Senator Quigley is authority for the statement that it's a horse.

As soon as President Wilson was sworn in, the Governor joined the Massachusetts troops at the corner of B and Fourth streets, and mounting a charger, took command of the Bay State troops.

The Governor, it is said, hadn't been on a horse before in fifteen years, and the Governor and today's horse were perfect strangers.

LONDON'S COMMENT ON WILSON'S ADDRESS IS VERY FAVORABLE

LONDON, March 4.—Unusual interest is being taken by the British press in the inauguration and policies of President Wilson.

Columns of President Wilson's inaugural address and the speech of Vice-President Marshall are printed in late editions of afternoon papers here today, together with a great amount of favorable comment.

They all express the hope that President Wilson very early in his administration will take steps to have the Panama Canal question, the only issue existing now between England and the United States, settled upon a just and equitable basis.

The estate is at least $500,000, and is expected to schedule more than that figure.

FIND BRIDE, IN SEARCH FOR HUSBAND, SHOT

Mrs. Mary Paraska, a bride of three months, was shot in a mysterious manner in the house at No. 75 Howard avenue, Quincy, today. Pending an investigation, Klem Klitick, No. 100 Summer street, Quincy, is held by the police on a technical charge.

Mrs. Paraska came to Quincy yesterday from across the Atlantic searching for her husband, who had been working at the Fore River shipyards. Upon learning last evening that he had gone to Cochrane, Ont., Canada, to work in a general store, she went to some of her countrywomen at Quincy Point and unpacked for help.

The police charge that during the evening she was in the company of Klitick. Today some of her country women took her to Nicola Kapuraka, a well known Quincy gardener, who has often befriended Russians stranded in this country without funds or friends.

LOOKS YEARS YOUNGER! GRAY HAIR DARKENED BEAUTIFULLY WITH SAGE

Says Sage and Sulphur Will Stop Falling Hair and Cure Dandruff.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, then left to age and carefully filtered will turn gray, streaked, faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggy and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug store, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss. Some druggists make their own, but it isn't nearly so nice as "Wyeth's."

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight and by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, after another application or two it will be restored to its natural color and be even more glossy, soft and luxuriant than ever.

Local druggists say they are selling lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and it surely helps folks appear years younger.

$20,000 FIRE IN GARAGE AT WEST PEABODY

The wooden garage owned by the E. E. Elder Company, on Newbury street, West Peabody, was destroyed early today by a disastrous fire caused by spontaneous combustion in cotton waste and oil. The fire department of Salem came five miles, but were unable to check the fire.

The loss is estimated at about $20,000. Twelve automobiles were in the garage when the fire was discovered. Seven are a total loss.

Those who assisted in getting out the automobiles which were saved did so at great risk, as it was feared that gasoline stored in the building might at any time explode. Attempt to save the remaining machines was abandoned on the advice of spectators.

Mrs. Fanny Feinstein was found on the third floor partially overcome by smoke, and was carried to the street by firemen. Isaac Rosenkrantz, his wife, two daughters and a son, who live on the top floor, escaped to the roof of an adjoining building.

Actress Tells Secret

A Well Known Actress Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair and Promoted Its Growth With a Simple Home-Made Mixture.

Miss Blanche Rose, a well-known actress, who darkened her gray hair with a simple preparation which she mixed at home, in a recent interview at Chicago, Ill., made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the required shade. This will make a gray-haired person look 20 years younger. It is also fine to promote the growth of hair, relieves itching and scalp humors and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair."—Advertisement.

GET $1,400 IN LAST BREAK BY LOWELL GANG

LOWELL, March 4.—The police believe that an organized band of safe breakers and burglars are operating in this city, and are responsible for a wave of robberies from cash registers in stores and saloons here within the last few days.

The latest robbery reported to the police today was that from the grain store of Paul Vigeant, at No. 245 Moody street, where thieves took $1,415.99 from the safe. Of this amount but a small part was Vigeant's property, $1,000 being insurance from the estate of his brother who died recently, and $181 belonging to the Order of Foresters of America, of which Vigeant is an officer. Vigeant claims to have left the safe open by mistake last night, and that the robbers escaped through a back window which was found open today.

CHARLESTOWN ASKS NEW SCHOOL NAMES

The Charlestown Improvement Association will ask the Boston School Board to change the names of many of the schools in the Charlestown district, giving them the names of prominent Charlestown citizens instead of streets by which they are known. Among the names which they suggest are those of Starr King, an orator who helped save California for the Union; Samuel Dexter, Secretary of the Treasury and of War during the administration of John Adams; Nathum Chapin, Charles E. Daniels, and Abraham E. Cutter, members of the original school board when Charlestown was a city; Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph, and Nathaniel Gorham, president of the first Provincial Congress.

HUMAN CHAIN SAVES TWO FROM CHARLES

It took a "human chain," ropes and ladders to pull a boy, whose name could not be learned, and Frank J. Ryan, bookkeeper for the O'Hara Dial Company of Waltham, who had gone to the boy's rescue, from the waters of the Charles River at Packard's Cove, Waltham. The two had broken through thin ice. The boy with other boys was playing there when he fell through. Ryan went to his rescue and crawled out almost to the boy when the ice broke. The cries of boys nearby attracted a number of men, who brought the "human chain," ropes and ladders into play.

MUSTEROLE

No Plaster! No Blister!

Everybody knows how the good old-fashioned mustard plaster relieves a cold, an ache or a pain.

Your mother and your grandmother always applied it. The plaster burned awfully. But it surely brought relief.

MUSTEROLE is the same remedy without the plaster and without the blister.

MUSTEROLE is a clean, white ointment, made with the oil of mustard.

You don't have to bother with a cloth. You simply rub MUSTEROLE on the spot where the pain is—rub it in briskly—and the pain is gone!

Not a blister is left, even on tender skin! Instead it has a delicious, comforting effect.

There is nothing like MUSTEROLE for Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Croup, Stiff Neck, Asthma, Neuralgia, Headache, Congestion, Pleurisy, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Pains and Aches of the Back or Joints, Sprains, Sore Muscles, Bruises, Chilblains, Frosted Feet, Colds of the Chest (it prevents pneumonia). Millions of jars of MUSTEROLE are sold annually. It is a staple in the large hospitals. Doctors and nurses use it and recommend it to patients. Ask your doctor.

At your druggist's, in 25c and 50c jars, and a special large hospital size for $2.50.

If your druggist cannot supply you send 25c or 50c to the Musterole Company, Cleveland, O., and we will mail you a jar, postpaid.

AGAIN INDICT RUBBER MEN IN MAIL FRAUDS

The Federal Grand Jury today returned indictments against Warren R. Wheeler, Stillman Shaw and G. Alden Whitmore, on charges of using the mails to defraud in connection with the promotion of the North American Rubber Company.

The three defendants were indicted several months ago, but at a hearing before Judge Dodge on demurrers filed by the defendants, he ruled the indictments defective and quashed them. Payton Gordon, special assistant to Attorney General Wickersham, has had charge of the prosecution of the men.

Wheeler and Shaw, who comprise the Wheeler & Shaw Corporation, were fiscal agents for the North American Rubber Company and Whitmore was in charge of stock sales.

RILEY DENIES BRIBE TALK WITH M'DEVITT

McDevitt to support the bill I have before the Legislature.

"I never intimated or suggested any motive of bribery. I am here also to tell the committee that I've never spoken to Representative Buckley regarding my measure."

Then Riley passed into the committee room. The doors were opened and a public session was declared. There was an immediate rush to get in.

Riley entered the committee room at 12:40 and came out in just sixty seconds, according to one reporter who "clocked" him.

When the committee met there was a strong possibility that several legislators, whose names have been mentioned by McDevitt in his talk of a $300 bribe offer, would be called on to give their versions of his statements.

There was talk of a move toward expelling McDevitt should members of his party in the Senate get together to demand such action.

Friends of Representative John H. Buckley of Dorchester, whom the committee exonerates of the M'Devitt charges, demand further action. They are indignant that his name should be used so carelessly.

Judge Riley Defends Buckley.

In this connection the office of Judge Thomas P. Riley, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, has given out the following telegram, from him at Washington, with an inquiring party:

The Massachusetts delegation in Washington is aflame with indignation the ridiculous charge against Representative John H. Buckley. His integrity is beyond suspicion.

THOMAS P. RILEY, Chairman.

Another formal, under-oath inquiry is sought by many to clear up several phases of the case.

Representative Buckley absolutely denies McDevitt's allegation. Representative Buckley says:

I deny absolutely that I offered this man (McDevitt) $300, or that $300 was ever mentioned between us. I met this man first on a Monday downstairs and we had a pleasant conversation. I later met him here at the State House. I spoke to the Senator about my bill.

Representative Buckley was today reported to be confined to his home in a serious condition. He suffered a severe shock several years ago from which he never fully recovered and it was said today by close friends that the shock of this startling allegation made against him has rendered him very weak.

The committee, after an executive session following the hearing at which Senator McDevitt identified Representative Buckley as the man who had approached him and "mentioned $300," gave out the following statement exonerating Buckley.

Committee Clears Buckley.

The Joint Committee on Rules will meet Tuesday at 12 o'clock to consider further the investigation of the charges of Senator McDevitt.

The committee is unanimously of the opinion that the statements made by Senator McDevitt relative to Representative John H. Buckley, unsupported by any other evidence, are so vague, inconsistent and contradictory that they furnish no basis for any reflection on the integrity of Representative Buckley.

Friends of Representative Buckley in the Legislature today urged the Committee on Rules to report in favor of the adoption of the order to enable the committee to summons witnesses and place them under oath.

The AMERICAN has been told by a person who says he knows Riley, that Riley talked with McDevitt about his bill after having canvassed the members of the Committee on Liquor Law and had found that the committee, not including McDevitt, stood five for the bill to five against.

Mr. Riley, in an interview with an AMERICAN reporter, admits that he canvassed the Liquor Law Committee and spoke with Senator McDevitt about his bill, but denies that he found in his canvass that the committee stood five to five. Mr. Riley lives at No. 16 Leslie street, Dorchester. He says:

I have a bill pending before the Legislature to authorize the refunding of parts of fees for licenses to sell intoxicating liquors under certain conditions. I saw Senator McDevitt in relation to my bill.

Yet I am astounded that he should drag my name into this thing. I can't conceive his reason for so doing. Here are the facts:

As a member of the Liquor Law Committee, I thought it well to see him and try to enlist his support for the bill. In fact I saw all the members of this committee. The bill is before them for a report to the Legislature.

I went up to the Senate chamber and sent in my card. This was seven to ten days ago. He sent out and invited me in and had a chat. He told me at that time that he should do all in his power to assist in getting the bill reported favorably. That's all there was to it.

I never made any suggestion to meet him outside, nor was anything said about money being in it. That was the only time I met him

Who Is Telling the Truth Now?

John J. McDevitt.

Representative John H. Buckley of Dorchester told me in the Senate reading room that if I would vote on a certain measure there would be three hundred in it for me. Three or four days before I saw a man named Riley. His name is on a liquor petition. He asked me to support his bill.—SENATOR JOHN J. M'DEVITT of Quincy.

I saw Senator McDevitt and other members of the Legislative Committee on Liquor Laws in relation to my liquor bill. I never made any suggestion to meet him outside, nor was anything said about money being in it. That was the only time I met him. I am a resident of the district represented by Buckley. I have spoken with him, but never about my bill.—JOHN J. RILEY.

WOMAN CHARGES POLYGAMY BY MORMONS HERE

"Mormons are practicing polygamy in Massachusetts and are luring wives from their lawful husbands," according to a statement to the AMERICAN today by Mrs. Louie E. Brittain of Revere, who was brought up in the Mormon church, but left it to fight against what she declares to be a "House of Bondage" for women.

Mrs. Brittain declares Mormon elders are particularly active in Massachusetts towns and are ingratiating themselves into families in several rural districts in attempting to make converts.

Mrs. Brittain said:

Lately I have been going through many towns in Massachusetts. You would be surprised to find how many Mormon elders are working the smaller towns in the interests of that church. They do not any longer spend much time in the larger cities.

I found elders in Southboro, going into homes and talking with young people. They will often be found in the churches. One Mormon I found in that same town, a member of the Union Congregational Church. They are using every means to get hold of people.

At Webster I came across a young girl thoroughly infatuated with the Mormon elders. They had got such control over her that this young woman may be taken elsewhere to become part of the church. In this town I had a petition signed by 172 mothers against the elders.

In Dedham I found elders walking on both sides of the street. They were selling their tracts and talking with young persons.

Then the Mormons have bought a farm in Oxford and this will undoubtedly be used as a Summer camp, where their most effective work will be done.

In Putnam I found a young man who had been lured away under the influence of these Mormons.

They work their way into the family life through a variety of means. In every case I came across I found that the elders were trying to persuade the young members to get converted to the Mormon Church.

The tactics of that church are being practiced right here in Massachusetts. Right here in this State polygamy is being carried on.

If the doctrine and covenant of the Mormon Church, as well as what is called "The Pearl of Great Price," were circulated largely, it would make Massachusetts people stare. You must be careful to get in touch with the right crowd. Mormons have a way of concealing many things from the eyes of the Gentiles. There are "celestial marriages" going on right here in this State. Mormons cannot deny this.

You can ask even the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints, which is on Sewall street, Somerville, whether they are not waiting in their priesthood meeting for a revelation on polygamy.

You must take note that in the Mormon Church man is exalted by his posterity, while woman gets her exaltation by motherhood.

There are marriages for time in the Mormon Church, which they call man's law. Then there are marriages for eternity, which they call God's law.

You may be married according to the law of the State. This will be man's law. Then, in becoming a Mormon, you can be married to another man's wife. This being performed by the celestial law of the Mormon Church, becomes a celestial marriage.

Mormons do not think that any one is married except in their way. They say that all marriages performed outside of their church are not marriages. So if you become a Mormon, no matter if you have been married when you enter the Mormon Church, you must be married again. You can desert your wife, simply because that it not a marriage, and then you can take a celestial wife.

MRS. LOUIE E. BRITTAIN, of Revere, former memer of Mormon Church, who tells of elders seeking converts in many Bay State towns.

DEMAND FAIR TREATMENT FOR GIRL STRIKERS

Charges that girl garment strikers under arrest at Boston Police Station 4 have suffered the humility of being searched by men officers were made at the headquarters of the Women's Trade Union today by Mrs. Davis R. Dewey, wife of Professor Dewey of Technology.

Two women were arrested today on technical charges of assault on two girl operatives.

Mrs. William C. Ripley, wife of Professor Ripley of Harvard, also came to strike headquarters today. She had enough bail money to release all the girl strikers under arrest. Mrs. Ripley said that if more girls were arrested she would see that bail for them was secured at once so that they would not have to stay in jail.

Mrs. Dewey volunteered to attend all the court hearings where the trials of the girls are held and to otherwise make sure that injustice is not done the girls. The wife of the Technology professor was indignant over the way the girls are alleged to have been treated while under arrest. She says on many occasions she was sure the arrest of the girls was absolutely unwarranted. Mrs. Dewey's services were gladly accepted at strike headquarters.

Girls from three more shops joined the strike today. They were induced to come out by pickets who have been actively at work.

The ranks of the men striking garment workers were swelled today by the arrival of about thirty men employed at a Washington street shop. The men marched from their shops to strike headquarters and were cheered upon their arrival.

Israel Imtis, a nineteen-year-old striker, was arrested on Washington street, near Franklin street, a little later, charged with assault on Irving Stockman of No. 615 Fifth street, South Boston, an operative.

IF YOUR CHILD NEEDS A PHYSIC

If cross, feverish, tongue coated, give "Syrup of Figs" to clean the stomach, liver and bowels.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's insides, the stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels, are clogged up with putrefying waste matter and need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When your child is listless, drooping, pale, doesn't sleep soundly or eat heartily or is cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, or is full of cold, give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs, and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels, without nausea, griping or sickness, and you surely will have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children; being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, it cannot be harmful; besides, they dearly love its delicious taste.

Mothers should always keep Syrup of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed. A little given today will save a sick child tomorrow.

Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is a delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

CUT TEACHER'S PAY FOR EACH ABSENCE, SCHOOL BOARD ORDER

Hereafter a married Boston school teacher absent from the school room for a day through illness or otherwise will find his or her pay cut down for every such day's absence.

At a meeting of the school committee an order to this effect was passed, the deduction for each day's absence to be equal to 1-200th part of the teacher's annual salary.

The evening centre also came in for opposition when a $150 appropriation order for advertising the centres was taken up.

Mr. Corcoran was against the appropriation. He considered the evening centres in a large measure a failure, and a piece of education which does not appeal to the people for whom it was intended. He asserted that outside of East Boston the centres are patronized and it is difficult to arouse interest in them.

HUNDREDS SAVED FROM PAIN OF A SURGEON'S KNIFE

"The first symptom of nervous debility will show in that weakest part of the body which is weakest at the time the ailment set in," said John Beazley Webb, the English nerve specialist. "Consequently, how can you know what is in your back it does not necessarily follow that your kidneys are diseased. Maybe the trouble is temporary, caused by nervous debility, owing to the fact that the line of communication between the brain and the kidneys has become deranged.

"If this is the case, the cause can be quickly removed by the new tonic, Tona Vita, which will once more put the brain in direct charge of the kidneys and other organs, and nature herself will relieve the diseased condition. Hundreds of users of Tona Vita have been restored to health when they thought that they were suffering from some organic disease that would necessitate a trip to the operating table.

"Tona Vita, which is now being largely used, can be purchased in any of the drug stores of Boston.

"A few of the symptoms to which users of Tona Vita have testified they were suffering from are: Loss of appetite, poor memory, loss of weight, morbid imagination, sense of heaviness about the bowels, pains in the back and spine, numbness in the limbs and that general run-down feeling. Any of these symptoms indicate nervous debility and can quickly be relieved by the use of the new national tonic."

LICENSE CHANGE IN NINE TOWNS; 3 WOMEN WIN

The election of three women to the offices of School Committee, the swinging of five towns to the license column and the changing of four from "wet" to "dry" were the net results of the voting in scores of Massachusetts towns.

In West Newbury Mrs. Jeannette Gowen was elected to the School Committee, Mrs. Anna S. Hasting won that office in Saugus and Mrs. Marion Watts was elected to the same place at Winthrop.

Those towns swung from "dry" to "wet:" Bedford, Charlton, Middleton, Sandwich, Warren. Those "wet" towns went "dry:" Belchertown, Gardner, Granville, Petersham.

Mrs. Watts is the first woman to be elected to a town office at Winthrop in twenty-five years. She received 916 votes against 828 given Dr. Orville E. Johnson.

Mrs. Watts' Plan.

Today Mrs. Watts gave a brief outline of her plans as Winthrop's School Committeewoman. She said:

"First, I want to thank all the friends that have rallied to my support. I did not seek the office and I did not make a campaign. My friends, who thought the women of Winthrop should be represented in town affairs, especially in school matters, came to me and requested that I run for School Committee. I did so with the understanding that I should not have to campaign. The men folks campaigned for me and I am happy to say that we carried the election.

"Now as to my plans. I have many ideas regarding the schools and many reforms that I want to advocate. But I shall not use snapshot judgment. I shall first study the needs of our schools, for some of my ideas will not be practically for Winthrop schools. I must study the situation from the point of a member of the School Committee first.

Not a Suffragette.

"As soon as I have found out the requirements here I shall advocate the reforms that I am convinced are the best for the schools of the town. It is impossible for me to say more about my plans at this time."

Dr. Johnson, whom Mrs. Watts defeated, had been a member of Winthrop's School Committee for over eight years. Mrs. Watts is the second woman ever to hold office in Winthrop. Twenty-five years ago there was a woman on the School Committee. She served two years.

Mrs. Watts is not a Suffragette. She admits it. She is a prominent member of the Order of the Eastern Star and is past matron of this body of "Women Masons" in Massachusetts.

"YOU poor child!" His tone was full of something deeper than compassion, and his eyes spoke volumes. "Do you suppose I think you are doing well when I see you wearing the garb of a menial and working for people to whom you are far superior—people who by all the rights of education and refinement ought to be in the kitchen serving you?"

"It was the safest thing I could do, and really the only thing I could get to do at once," she tried to explain. "I'm doing it better every day."

"I have no doubt. You can be an artist at serving as well as anything else, if you try. But now that is all over. I am going to take care of you."

There is no use of protesting. If I cannot do it one way I will in another. There is one question I must ask first, and I hope you will trust me enough to answer it. Is there any other—any other man who has the right to care for you, and is unable or unwilling to do it?"

She looked up at him, her large eyes still shining with tears, and shuddered slightly.

"Oh, no!" she said. "Oh, no, I thank God there is not! My dear uncle has been dead for four years, and there has never been any one else who cared since father died."

He looked at her, a great light beginning to come into his face; but she did not understand and turned her head to hide the tears.

"Then I am going to tell you something," he said, his tone growing lower, yet clear enough for her to hear every word distinctly.

A tall, oldish girl with a discontented upper lip stalked through the hall, glanced in at the door, and sniffed significantly, but they did not see her. A short, baggy-coated man outside hovered anxiously around the building and passed the very window of that room, but the shade opposite them was down, and they did not know. The low, pleasant voice went on:

"I have come to care a great deal for you since I first saw you, and I want you to give me the right to care for you always and protect you against the whole world."

She looked up, wondering.

"I mean that I love you, and I want to make you my wife. Then I can defy the whole world, if need be, and put you where you ought to be."

"Oh!" she breathed softly.

"Wait, please," he pleaded, laying his hand gently on her little, trembling one. "Don't say anything until I have finished. I know, of course, that this will be startling to you.

"You have been put up to feel that such things must be more carefully and deliberately done. I do not want you to feel that this is the only way I can help you, either.

"If you are not willing to be my wife I will find some other plan. But this is the best way, if it isn't too hard on you, for I love you as I never dreamed that I could love a woman. The only question is, whether you can put up with me until I can teach you to love me a little."

She lifted eloquent eyes to his face.

"Oh, it is not that," she stammered, a rosy light flooding cheek and brow. "It is not that at all. But you know nothing about me. If you knew, you would very likely think as others do, and—"

"Then do not tell me anything about yourself, if it will trouble you. I do not care what others think. If you have poisoned a husband, I should know that he needed poisoning, and anyway I should love you and stand by you."

"I have not done anything wrong," she said gravely.

"Then, if you have done nothing wrong, we will prove it to the world, or, if we cannot prove it, we will fly to some desert island and live there in peace and love. That is the way I feel about you. I know that you are good and true and lovely! And one might as well try to prove to me that you were crazy as that you had done wrong in any way."

Her face grew strangely white.

"Well, suppose I was crazy?"

"Then I would take you and cherish you and try to cure you, and if that could not be done, I should help you to bear it."

"Oh, you are wonderful!" she breathed, the light of a great love growing in her eyes.

The bare, prosaic walls stood stolidly about them, indifferent to romance or tragedy that was being wrought out within its walls. The whirl and hum of the city without, the grins and sell of the city within, were alike forgotten by these two as their hearts throbbed in the harmony of a great passion.

"Do you think you could learn to love me?" said the man's voice, with the sweetness of the love song of the ages in its tone.

"I love you now," said the girl's low voice. "I think I have loved you from the beginning, though I never dared to think of it in that way. But it would not be right for me to become your wife when you know practically nothing about me."

"Have you forgotten that you know nothing of me?"

"Oh, I do know something about you," she said shyly. "Remember that I have dined with your friends. I could not help seeing that they were good people, especially that delightful old man, the Judge. He looked startlingly like my dear father. I saw how they all honored and loved you. And then what you have done for me, and the way that you treated an utterly defenceless stranger, were equal to years of mere acquaintance. I feel that I know a great deal about you."

He smiled. "Thank you," he said, "but I have not forgotten that something more is due you than that slight knowledge of me, and before I came out here I went to the pastor of the church of which my mother is a member, and which I have always attended and asked him to write me a letter. He is so widely known that I felt it would be an introduction for me."

He held an open letter in her lap, and looking down, she saw that it was signed by the name of one of the best known pulpit orators in the land, and that it spoke in the highest terms of the young man whom it named as "my well-loved friend."

"It is also your right to know that I have always tried to live a pure and honorable life. I have never told any woman but you that I loved her—except an elderly cousin with whom I thought I was in love when I was nineteen. She cured me of it by laughing at me, and I have been heart-whole ever since."

She raised her eyes from reading the letter.

"You have all these and I have nothing," She spread out her hands helplessly. "It must seem strange to you that I am in this situation. It does to me. It is awful."

She put her hands over her eyes and shuddered.

"It is to save you from it all that I have come." He leaned over and spoke tenderly. "Darling!"

"Oh, wait!" she caught her breath as her story.

"My father died when I was only a young girl. We had not much money, and my mother's older brother took us to his house to live. My mother was his youngest sister, and he loved her more than anyone else living.

"There was another sister, a half-sister, much older than my mother, and she had one son. He was a sulky, handsome boy, with a selfish, cruel nature. He seemed to be happy only when he was tormenting someone. He used to come to uncle's to visit when I was there, and he delighted in annoying me. He stretched barbed wire where he knew I was going to pass in the dark to throw me down and tear my clothes. He threw a quantity of burrs in my hair, and once he led me into a hornet's nest.

"After we went to live at my uncle's, Richard was not there so much. He had displeased my uncle, and he sent him away to school, but at vacation times he came again, and kept the house in discomfort. He seemed always to have a special spite against me. Once he broke a Dresden vase that uncle prized, and told him I had done it.

"Mother did not live long after father died, and after she was gone, I had no one to stand between me and Richard. Sometimes I had to tell my uncle, but oftener I tried to bear it, because I knew Richard was already a great distress to him.

FEDERALS TAKE CAPITAL CITY OF COAHUILA

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—Saltillo, capital city of the State of Coahuila and the stronghold of General Carranza, the Maderist leader in that State, has been captured by the federals. This word was received by General Mondragon, Minister of War, today, but immediately afterwards communication failed, and it was supposed that the retreating insurgents had cut the wires.

That the government of Provisional President Huerta has no designs upon the living members of the Madero family was made known by Foreign Minister de la Barra.

President Huerta seems to be very popular. He has discarded most of the dignity and red tape of his office and usually goes on foot when he leaves the National Palace. On his way to the arsenal he was mobbed by a friendly throng who wanted to show good will in a rough fashion and he and his two aides had to seize a taxicab and flee.

The widow of General Limon, a rebel chief, who was executed for sedition, has sworn allegiance to the government after raising an army of 1,000 men to avenge her husband's death. At her own request she has been created a non-commissioned. She is the first woman to be an officer in the Mexican army. She will head her 1,000 men in a campaign against bandits and outlaws.

SON DROPS AT BIER; FATHER NOW DYING

Grief at the loss of his mother brought death to Charles M. Chadwick, twenty-five, of No. 43 Holbrook street, Jamaica Plain. When the news was broken to John Chadwick, the father, he collapsed, and little hope is entertained for his recovery. Mr. Chadwick is Boston's oldest retired policeman.

CASSIDY SHOWS WHY BILL TO LIFT MYSTERY FROM SAUSAGE IS GOOD

Mr. Cassidy today adds further facts in regard to the use of preservatives and coloring matter in sausages and meats. There is a bill before the Senate Committee on Public Health for consideration, forbidding the use of coloring matter or cereals in sausage.

Mr. Cassidy urges this bill's passage, and shows that if the bill is passed it will close the doors to a mass of fraud and deception, and remove much of the cloud of mystery which today lurks about the sausage trade, so far as the consumer is concerned.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

To the average man or woman, sausage is the great food mystery.

It ranks with hash and bread pudding as a food about which there can be only conjectures.

The bill bearing my name, and endorsed by Joseph L. Johnson, Cambridge's capable and progressive food inspector, which has been presented to the Committee on Public Health in the Legislature, would remove this mystery, and make sausage a clean and honest food, whose ingredients were a matter of common knowledge.

This bill, like every other pure food bill now before the Legislature upon which hearings have been given—with one or two possible exceptions—was strenously opposed by Alton E. Briggs, Executive Secretary of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange.

Some Indisputable Facts.

I want today to recite some facts which cannot be disputed, as to the use of coloring and preservative in sausage. I have before me a little orange colored book labeled:

"Salesman's confidential price list of Presco (trade mark) products, The Preservaline Manufacturing Company, Brooklyn, N. Y."

This is the company which manufactures Preservaline, the powdered sodium sulphite, the use of which I discussed in a series of articles last week.

This XXX Preservaline is thus described in the pamphlet:

"'XXX' Preservaline, the renowned preservative for chopped meat, Hamburger steak, all cuts of meat, chops, ribs, loins, quarters of beef, veal, mutton, etc., and for pork sausage. (Then the price list, and then) 'XXX' Preservaline keeps FRESH MEAT FRESH and holds the natural red color in the meat.

Doesn't Tell Whole Truth.

Neither in this book, or on the can, is there any statement of the fact that this preservaline consists of sodium sulphite, an antiseptic substance, which experts have testified to be a poison. If an innocent butcher bought this and I did, and used it innocently, he might cause dangerous or fatal illnesses among his customers, and would not be apt to label the meat as containing a preservative.

I asked a butcher, the other day about the methods of a big sausage manufacturer in Boston, who deals in meat preserved with sodium sulphite. He said:

"Yes, I've seen that man's plant. There's a grinding machine with the meat going in at one side, the preservative being sprinkled on it, and on the other side THERE'S A STREAM OF WATER GOING IN."

There appears to be no doubt that sausage manufacturers regularly use an unnecessary amount of water in their products.

Here are some of the other products of this preservaline company:

"P. L. P.—Food Law Pickle. A curing preparation containing no prussic acid. What not Mesembrinthemum substances, but only ingredients that are permitted by all pure food laws. IT IS USE IS LEGAL EVERYWHERE."

"O. K. Pickle—contains only permitted ingredients."

"Salpresco—A ready-to-use-pickle for corned beef."

"Seasonine—A legal condimental preservative."

"Boer's Head Brand Binder—A pure cereal produce without admixture of any chemicals or foreign substances. Can be used wherever cereals are allowed in sausage and bologna."

"Pyrocel—A non-poisonous, harmless, certified coloring for the casings of bolognas, frankforts, wieners and other smoked sausage. Pyrocel can be used wherever the COLORING OF CASINGS IS ALLOWED."

"Vegecol—A liquid vegetable coloring for sausage casings."

"Liverine—A harmless, non-poisonous coloring in powder form for the casings of liver sausages. Gives the desired shade."

"Kanzarine—An outside coloring for bologna, etc. Cannot be used in inspected establishments. Is a color of great strength and magnificent shade."

"Special 77 Preservaline contains only preservative ingredients permitted by many States, amongst them New York, Michigan, Montana, California and MASSACHUSETTS."

Briggs Against Measure.

These are a few of the products described in this little "confidential booklet." Note how in some cases emphasis is laid on the fact that the preparations are non-poisonous. Preservaline, I have shown, is poisonous, and I do not believe this, or any other poisonous substance has a place in foods.

Enlightened States clear across the country are passing laws or have passed laws, forbidding the use of colorings or cereals in sausage. Massachusetts should rank herself also under the pure food banner.

Alton E. Briggs, as I have said, opposed this sausage bill. Mr. Briggs' record in the present Legislature almost makes his opposition an argument in favor of a given bill. He has seen fit to attack myself, the AMERICAN and other friends of these bills, and insinuates—never making specific statements—that our "motives are questionable."

It should perhaps be stated that Mr. Briggs is the paid representative of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange, and that he presumably acts for them when he appears in opposition to these bills.

The bills he has opposed before legislative committees this year include a bill to force retailers selling skim milk cheese to tell their customers the truth about that cheese by labelling it and the package in which it is sold; a bill to prevent retailers from selling you more than 16 per cent. water in the pound of butter you buy; bills to strike out the word "knowingly" from various food measures, so as to protect the consumer from fraud, rather than the retailer from prosecution, and this bill to forbid the use of coloring or cereal in sausage.

Other States have this latter law, and the sausage business apparently has not suffered—while the consumer is protected. Then why not Massachusetts?

SOCIALIST START PLANS FOR GREAT MAY DAY MEETING

May Day, the first day of the month, will be celebrated by the Socialists of Boston and vicinity by a demonstration and mass meeting at Tremont Temple. Other workers are asked to join in the celebration. The first conference for the purpose of making arrangements for the celebration will be held March 14, at No. 14 Park square.

The Boston Socialist party lyceum lectures, beginning March 6, at Lorimer Hall, will be delivered by William E. Duffy, William Francis Barnard, Florence Watties, Walter Huggins and Fred Hurst. These lectures represent the Boston end of a national campaign.

Next Sunday at 3:30 p. m., in Franklin Union Hall, Professor Alfred C. Lane of Tufts College will speak in opposition to certain theories of Karl Marx.

SEVEN AUTOS LOST IN LYNNFIELD FIRE

Seven automobiles, valued at between $14,000 and $15,000, were destroyed and telegraph connection between Boston and Portsmouth and other cities was cut off by a fire which burned the garage of E. V. Elder, on the Newburyport turnpike, at South Lynnfield. The fire was spectacular and of unknown origin. The total damage is estimated at $20,000.

Help was summoned from Peabody and Lynn. The Bremen arrived on time to save Mr. Elder's home.

$126,000 LOSS, HUNT FIREBUG IN CAMBRIDGE

Damage amounting to $126,000 is the result of three fires in Cambridge. The police fear the third blaze, as well as the first two, was incendiary, and are making an investigation today.

The most spectacular fire reduced to a shell the automobile garage of Meyer Abrams & Company, at No. 159 Vassar street. Nearly fifty motor trucks and touring cars were demolished and an adjoining garage seriously damaged. Albert Harshenor of No. 64 Eustis street, Roxbury, night watchman, was blown off his feet by an explosion of gasoline.

The first of the three fires, a general alarm, started in the yards of the Cardelli Coal Company, North Cambridge. The yards are near a large tenement district.

In the meantime a fire, thought to be of incendiary origin, was discovered in the chapel of St. James Church. This was confined to the cellar.

War in Brookline as Business Tries to Cross Dead Line

There is another little hub-bub in Brookline. Again the wealthy residents of the aristocratic town are endeavoring to maintain a sort of dead line between the ultra fashionable residential district and the commercial part of the town. So in a few days a delegation of citizens living in the vicinity of Washington square will ask the selectmen to purchase a plot of land fronting on the square which, it is claimed, will soon be the site of a big business block.

The land is owned by Rhodes Brothers of Brookline and they propose to erect a building on the lot. Such a building is contemplated will, according to the objecting property owners, greatly reduce the value of the surrounding property and also cut off all direct approach to the new park or playground which surrounds the new Michael Driscoll School.

Several of the property owners have voluntarily offered to sign a subscription paper for the purpose of purchasing the land, should the town decline to make the purchase.

No stores as yet have made their appearance on the west side of Beacon street in all its length from the Reservoir down to Coolidge Corner, and it is desired to keep that side of the street free for residences.

CREW OF HAYNES REPORTED SAFE

Further news of the J. Manchester Haynes, a Boston schooner, whose crew is reported to have been picked up by the revenue cutter Gresham, is expected soon from Norfolk, Va., whither the cutter is reported to be bound. The Haynes sailed from Jacksonville for New York, February 20.

MAYOR HURLEY'S STORY OF BOXING CONTESTS AT NEW SALEM CLUB

Mayor John F. Hurley of Salem, who attended the first bouts of the new Salem Athletic Association as official censor, thinks boxing is a tip-top sport—if it is carried out in the way the initial bouts of the Salem club were staged. He did say that personally he wouldn't give one of the new Indian nickels to see a set-to because he doesn't understand the science of the game. But he said he saw nothing objectionable in the Salem bouts, and for that reason there wasn't any blue pencilling done by the "Mayor censor."

It was the second boxing exhibition the Mayor has ever attended. The first was five years ago. The Mayor saw his second bouts at the North Street Rink in Salem. AN AMERICAN representative sat next to him.

The reporter jotted down the Mayor's comments and criticisms in every round. What the Mayor said makes unintensely interesting story and here it is by rounds:

Mayor's Story by Rounds.

BOUT 1.

Abe Aronson of Boston vs. Jimmie Belmont of Lawrence.

ROUND 1.—Just like two boys having a sparring match in a barn. Both are quick. I can't see any brutality in this first round.

ROUND 2.—They hit each other in the shoulder more than in the face or body. It appears to me they should hit each other's noses more instead of their backs. I can't see any damage done in that round.

ROUND 3.—Rumbled when one of the boxers missed his blow). There are big gloves. I haven't seen a fellow get hit yet in the face. They hit on the sides.

ROUND 4.—They are in good condition, as they are examined by the doctors. It looks to me as if they put grease on their bodies, as I notice their gloves slip. They hit the gloves and make a noise. That is a good duck as Aronson ducked a Belmont swing. I think Aronson is clever.

ROUND 5.—It goes so fast. The fellow with the red trunks is quick. He jumps in and out. That's a good ring. It's soft. If anybody gets hurt I'll declare the bout off. I am the author of public safety. If there is say trouble the marshal will stop the exhibition.

ROUND 6.—There's nothing rough here. The ring is padded in good shape. There's no danger. The bout (as Aronson passed one to Belmont's jaw). His deserved it (the boxers saw was given the decision). There's nothing brutal about that exhibition. Not a drop of blood was drawn.

BOUT 2.

Young Clark of Fall River vs. Eddie Connolly of Everett.

ROUND 1.—See them hit each other in the ribs. These fellows have science. Clark is quick on his feet. A woman could come and see this, as there is no hooting and no mix-up. I thought there might be some ladies here when I saw the crowd outside. See them laugh at each other. Connolly isn't so tough as the other fellow.

ROUND 2.—Connolly fouled Clark and the latter gets the decision. That was good judgment when the referee disqualified Connolly for hitting low. When they know the rules they should live up to them. When they hit below the belt they should be disqualified. It's the proper thing to do.

BOUT 3.

Young Clancy of the North End vs. Frankie Mack of Beachmont.

ROUND 1.—Why, women could come here and sit down and enjoy it. I wouldn't give five cents for it, but at the same time, it isn't brutal. These are little fellows and they show action. The first round was fast and good exercise.

ROUND 2.—They are light on their feet. That long-legged fellow (Francis) will hit Mack in the stomach, see if he don't.

ROUND 3.—This is a good round. Both boys show plenty of science.

ROUND 4.—These fellows couldn't make a dent in a pat of butter. They should bands. That was the proper thing to do. Mack gets the decision. That's good judgment.

BOUT 4.

Bay Wood of Fall River vs. Tommy O'Keefe of Philadelphia.

ROUND 1.—I see no objection to boxing, but I don't understand the game. Everything here appears to be all right. No hard feelings seem to exist between the boys. When they get through they shake hands and are good friends. It is interesting for a fellow like me who never saw bouts but once before to see how they box. Wood has got green pants on. They both have green. O'Keefe has a quick movement. The other fellow hasn't waked up yet. He came near throwing Wood to the floor. Good science. It limbers the arms and legs and body and puts him in good shape.

ROUND 2.—If I were the referee I would walk right under between them and go to the other side when I told them to break. I tell that science (when a clever bit of work was done). It's all science. No harm done.

ROUND 3.—I could get up and announce the boxers all right. This bout won't go twelve rounds. The little fellow (Wood) will do the wrong thing. He's too anxious. See Tommy bug each other around the heads. That fellow (O'Keefe) bangs onto the ropes too much. He should get out in the middle and box.

ROUND 4.—They sweat. They are hard as rocks, both of them. That's a good exhibition. Neither did any damage to the other.

ROUND 5.—These boys know their business. That little fellow (Wood) wants to mix it. They haven't so much stamina now. They are getting tired. O'Keefe is not so strong. If a man had rheumatism and took that exercise it would do him good. Just see that exercise! If they had my arm they wouldn't do it.

ROUND 6.—(This is where the Mayor became so enthusiastic he forgot himself and put on his silk hat. A moment later he removed it). They have plenty of muscle. If I were a young fellow I would want that exercise. See, he bit O'Keefe's glove. There isn't enough resin on the floor (when O'Keefe slipped).

ROUND 7.—If they don't do any more damage than they have done up till now there'll be no trouble. That's a good duck (as O'Keefe ducks). Look, look, O'Keefe defends blows on his gloves. It's about time for the bell to ring. They know (bell rings).

ROUND 8.—Why should they have four fellows in O'Keefe's corner to rub him down when Wood has only two? This exhibition is great. The little fellows are paying attention to business. If they had my boll on their arms they wouldn't be boxing.

ROUND 9.—They don't speak when they're working. See him hold his glove against his face. That's the first blow I've seen tonight (when O'Keefe uppercut Wood's face). It's a good shove.

ROUND 10.—Nothing wrong so far. I thought two genuine people who gave snarling exhibitions would stop when the referee said "three." That's a good blow on O'Keefe's breast. (Here Mayor Hurley gave up his chair and joined Marshal Lelsin over at the door. The audience gave three rousing cheers for the Mayor, whose final word was:

Everything was all right. No harm done, no bloodshed. I can't see any reason exstant it.

(The bout went two more rounds. It was referred to the write-up of the bout by the AMERICAN'S expert).

O'KEEFE-WOOD IN DRAW BOUT AT SALEM A. A.

SALEM, March 4.—The initial meeting of the Salem A. A. was held last night at the North street rink, and attracted a representative gathering of Salem residents, who were treated to the best boxing entertainment ever held on the North Shore.

Tommy O'Keefe and Bay Wood met in the feature contest, which was decided a draw after twelve rounds of very even boxing. Wood was the aggressor, but O'Keefe was so skilful in his defence that Wood could not gain any decided advantage.

The Fall River boy scored a slight lead early in the bout, but this was evened up by the time the match was half over, and in the last few rounds honors were decidedly even. The verdict by the third man in the arena, Dick Fleming of Marlborough, was well received.

There were three preliminary bouts, Frankie Mack of Beachmont won over Young" Clancy of the North End in three rounds. Clancy fell out of the ring, and the referee decided that it was best not to let him continue after that accident. Young" Clarke of Fall River, sparring partner of Bay Wood, defeated Eddie Conley of Everett in two rounds.

Conley submitted for Joe Farren of East Boston, who was present, but who had an injured ear, so that it was thought better not to permit him to box.

The first bout had as principals Alex Aronson of East Boston and Jimmy Belmont of Lawrence. The East Boston boy earned the decision in six rounds.

MAIN NEW BEDFORD BOUT CALLED OFF; FANS IN A RIOT

NEW BEDFORD, March 4.—A small-sized riot was created in the Elm Rink when it was announced that the Al Belmont-Benny Kauffmann bout, which was scheduled to go twelve rounds before the New Bedford A. C., was cancelled. Joseph A. Burke, the promoter, was besieged by the mob and a demand was made for the return of admission fees. He refused and clamoring crowd to the ticket office, and in the meantime escaped in the street.

The crowd then adjourned to police headquarters to obtain a warrant. They were advised to wait, however, in a big real estate owner and hotel proprietor and it is possible that action will be taken against him.

In the preliminaries, "Young" Peters of Somerset knocked out Fibh Rogers of New Bedford in the first round, and Kid Britt outfought "Young" Dias in eight rounds.

YACHT DIANA MAY FLY AMERICAN FLAG

WASHINGTON, March 4.—A bill to enable the commodore of the New York Yacht Club to fly the United States flag from the peak of the yacht Diana has been passed by the House, and was the vehicle of a denunciation by Democratic Leader Underwood of "the indefensible monopoly and trust in the coastwise trade." Mr. Underwood said he advocated the measure as an act of justice toward a ship, formerly the Lawrence, built at Glasgow, burned at Hoboken, N. J., in 1905, and four-fifths rebuilt in an American shipyard as a pleasure yacht, but yet unable to fly the American flag because of the coastwise shipping laws.

BROOKLINE MAN DOES WELL IN TOURNEY

PINEHURST, N. C., March 4.—Two hundred and twenty players participated in the opening rounds here of the ninth annual Spring golf tournament. Walter J. Travis led the field with a card of 76. H. Warren Corkran, Baltimore, was second with 78. Among the leaders were William C. Fownes, Jr., Pittsburgh, former national champion, and Parker W. Whitemore, Brookline, former Massachusetts champion.

CARROLL BEATS DAM IN BILLIARD PLAY

The thirteenth game in the three-cushion billiard series, which was played at the White Bear rooms last night, resulted in a win for Carroll over Dam by the score of 50 to 42. Carroll played exceptionally fine billiards, while Dam was not up to his usual speed. High runs were Dam 5, Carroll 4. Sains and Aumiton will meet tonight.

Mike Murphy Makes Unexpected Return to Quaker City

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., March 4.—Mike Murphy, coach of the University of Pennsylvania track team, will not be with the Phillies during the rest of their stay at Southern Pines, as has been reported. Instead, the veteran trainer is today resting in his home, having arrived in this city, his unexpected return being unknown to most of his friends at the university.

His object in returning to this city when it was expected that he would be in the South until the start of the outdoor season in April, was on account of the extremely hot weather there. He believed that he should be close to the university, whose interest he has so much at heart, and although he will take no active part in the coaching of the track men until the outdoor season starts he will be in position to give advice to Coach Haylock, who has had charge of the team this Winter.

EXETER ADDS THE SCHOOLBOY TROPHY TO COLLECTION

EXETER, N. H., March 4.—The handsome trophy which was won at the B. A. A. Interscholastic meet Saturday afternoon by the athletes from the New Hampshire preparatory school, trained by George Connors, has been placed in the trophy room at the gymnasium with the proper inscriptions, indicating that Exeter has won the first leg.

The feeling here is that it was a well earned victory, and after the postponed track events, which are to be held Wednesday afternoon, the athletes will take a long rest till the opening of the Spring term, when work will be started for the outdoor meets.

LEXINGTON-HUDSON MAY CLASH HERE

If now looks as if a post-season hockey game will be played between Lexington and Hudson High, as the latter school is anxious to get back at the sons of the Minute Men, for what they claim was one just treatment to their team, by having the score printed in the papers 2 to 1 in favor of Lexington, when Hudson claims it was a tie game, 3 to 1. If the Hudson team is real insistent, the match will probably be played in the Boston Arena, Friday afternoon, March 14, as there is no chance for any more ice this year on the outdoor ponds.

SEVEN STARS ENTER DAVIS CUP PLAY

LONDON, March 4.—The entries for Dwight F. Davis lawn tennis trophy have closed with a total of seven, the biggest number of entries in the history of the contest. The United States, Canada, France, Germany, Australasia, South Africa and Belgium will fight out the preliminaries for the privileges of playing the British holders.

TWO GIANTS HURT IN PRACTICE WORK

MARLIN, Tex., March 4.—Two of Manager McGraw's young men were in the incapacitated department today. Hanley of the pitching brigade was taken with a pain in his side, and today the trouble was diagnosed as an intestinal one. Jacobson, another big youngster, hurt his knee while pursuing a fly.

WIN FOR LEE.

Harry Lee, the speedy half-miler, who has progressed in the B. A. A. members' junior squash tournament without playing a match, yesterday got into action and advanced farther by defeating L. D. Harding, Jr., three games to two.

M'DONOUGH AND GALLANT CLASH IN MANCHESTER

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE should be plenty of action when Gilbert Gallant and "Young" McDonough clash in a twelve-round contest in Mechanics Hall at Manchester, N. H., tonight. The bout has aroused considerable enthusiasm and is sure to be witnessed by a big crowd of fight "fans."

McDonough is a strong, aggressive fighter and has put up some memorable battles. He gave Jack Britton the fight of his life at Thornton, R. I., last Fall and when the smoke of battle had blown over the jury of newspaper men at the ringside declared the "go" a draw.

McDonough will have an advantage in weight on Gallant, but regardless of this fact the Chester lad is confident that he will be returned the winner. Alex McLean has found it impossible to keep Gallant busy by pitting him against legitimate lightweights and so has been forced to sign his protege for bouts with bigger boys.

Tommy Flanagan of Canubridge will swap punches with "Kid" Labore of Manchester in the semi-final bout. Flanagan is a sterling fighting proposition and he is sure to give a good account of himself against the shifty Labore.

• • •

THE new boxing bill will be given a hearing at the State House today and it is hoped that the committee on legal affairs will give the bill fair consideration. Commissioner O'Neil of the New York Boxing Commission is now in this city and he will speak in favor of the new measure. O'Neil is one of the best known boxing authorities in the country and has always been one of the leading champions for clean, legalized boxing.

• • •

PACKEY McFARLAND and Jack Britton are putting on the finishing touches to their training for their ten-round bout which will take place in New York Friday night. A big party of Boston fans will make the trip to the big city in order to witness the fray and if the two men live up to their reputations the bout should be one of the greatest staged in an Eastern ring in years.

These "big" bouts, however, have a habit of turning out to be jokes, while there is usually more action crowded into the contests between the third and fourth rounds.

• • •

THE public, however, is always eager to see the "headliests" perform. There is a certain class of people who never enter a boxing club unless a champion or a near champion is one of the principals. Therefore, when the bout is a tame affair, they vend their way homeward thoroughly disgusted with the boxing game and to a certain degree they have good cause for their complaints.

Personally, I have found that there is usually more excitement and better boxing at these so-called 4-star shows than there is at a bout between two leading ring men. If you do not agree with this statement, just take in a few of these bouts between rising young glove wielders, and I believe that you will soon change.

• • •

JOHNNY MOONEY is today being congratulated for the fine bouts which he put up at the new Salem A. A. last night. The show was a great success and the crowd of 1,500 people was a fine tribute to the esteem in which Mooney is held by the boxing lovers of New England.

RILEY'S COLUMN

ONE R. W. WILLIAMS was lost between Cincinnati, O., and Kansas City, Mo., the other day, by reason of which the "bull" throwing exhibition between Garry Herrmann and Johnny Kling has continued five days beyond a point where it was supposed the bovine could go no further. And the steer is still in air.

• • •

AFTER dickering with our old friend, "Noisy John," through the press for several weeks, during which Mr. Herrmann dealt out daily several bushels of "con" about how crazy the Cincinnati team was to have "our Johnny" go there and teach Joe Tinker's boys how to pitch and catch, and how much money he would give John for the job, and "Noisy John" told everybody how reluctant he was to leave a million dollars worth of money invested in his billiard room in Kansas City without anybody there to collect the profits, Garry Herrmann announced positively that Kling had been signed up, and that he was to receive a salary of $6,000 a year, about $1,000 more than John received for managing the Pilgrims last season.

• • •

HERE is Herrmann's own word on the subject:

The long expected has turned up. Mr. Kling has certainly kept us in hot water, but we were determined to get Johnny, and our elaborate efforts have been crowned with success. Johnny will be a valuable asset to our club, as he is a veteran who knows the game from A to Z—he has the knowledge of the comebacks, the weaknesses and strong points of every twirler in the National League, and what he knows will be of our youngsters a world of good. He will head our training school for these youngsters and will teach them what they ought to know.

AFTER this appeared, Kling was interviewed in Kansas City "I have not received a contract from President Herrmann," he said. "The report from Cincinnati is news to me. The last time I heard from Herrmann was several weeks ago, when he wrote that he would send a man here to talk business with me. I haven't seen the man yet."

• • •

IN reply to this from Kling, Garry Herrman declared: "I received a telegram from R. M. Williams, who represents the club, and who has been in Kansas City for ten days negotiating with Kling. He telegraphed that Kling had signed his contract."

• • •

IN our humble opinion, Williams and Flanegan are synonymous. Our advice to Mr. Herrmann is forthwith to hire a man who can carry the name of R. M. Williams without bending his conscience, send him to Kansas City and have "Williams" offer Johnny Kling $4,000 or $5,000 for the season. Our advice to Kling is first to admit that neither he nor any other man can make $4,000 or $5,000 running a billiard room in Summer time in Kansas City and then to sign up to catch for Cincinnati. By these two acts, truth will be served, Cincinnati will get a good baseball catcher and instructer, Kling will have a good Summer job, and everybody should be happy.

• • •

FROM Herrmann's and Tinker's widely published activity in dealing daily with Johnny Kling and finally signing him up without Kling having any information on the subject at all—together with the fidelity with which Herrmann's and Tinker's activities were reported in the Cincinnati press, we believe we may have discovered the secret of why Cincinnati is the "most unpopular" baseball town in the big leagues." If the magnates "throw the ball" all Winter, you can hardly blame the "fans" for "throwing the hammer" all Summer.

• • •

IF they excite the "fans" into believing in Winter that they have at last acquired a pennant winner, if they enthuse them to such a pitch that they buy the grandstand out for the opening game as early as February, they ought not object if the "fans" pull blue murder when their hopes are dashed by calm realization of the facts in September. Cincinnati has a good baseball team, and has had one for a long time. Unfortunately, it is considered a world beater in Winter and worthless in Summer. If Herrman would conscientiously advertise his team as about a third, fourth or fifth place baseball nine during the Winter, the "fans" would probably patronize it as such all Summer.

• • •

HERRMANN and Cincinnati ought to recollect that New York, Chicago, and Pittsburg have taken all of the pennants and occupied the three first places in the National League most of the time the past twelve years; that there are four other cities interested in baseball besides Cincinnati which have not yet been able to break into the top row and that most of us in those four towns believe that that is what is the matter with the National League. It's useless to scream about it. The only course we know is to "saw wood," and try and keep up the combination. It looks like the Cubs are on the slide now; maybe good, hard fighting, less "bull throwing," and some astute diplomacy from Ebbet may oust the Giants and Pirates some day, in which case, both Herrmann and Cincinnati, as well as Boston, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and St. Louis—all fairly good baseball towns—will have their innings.

Hard Workout for Pilgrims Rookies Set Pace for Veterans

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

ATHENS, Ga., March 4.—Sore in body, but lively in spirits, the Boston National League squad surveyed the heavens today and prayed for rain. They were like the swimmer that shivers on shore and hates to take the plunge. They realized the sooner they got to work the sooner the soreness would disappear, yet they felt like putting off the practice.

If they had not let loose the way they did yesterday, they wouldn't have felt so sore today, but the youngsters set the pace and the veterans, who should have known better, found themselves drawn into the vortex of strenuosity. No harm was done by that hard practice yesterday, because Manager Stallings watched the men carefully and kept them from using their arms more than they should.

BUT the fierce batting and the running and sudden stopping for beswhiskered grounders and the jumping around for wild throws put a crimp in the bodies of the men that should not have been there today.

The worst is yet to come, however. Tomorrow and the next day will be the worst of the year for soreness in the squad. After that the lame and the sore will begin to be themselves again, and the critics will have a chance to get a line on the men. Just now all that one can get are impressions. For example, there is an impression that a young Southerner named William Devitt Calhoun (nicknamed Mary) will make good.

The rookie formerly played on the University of Georgia team. But he left college and played baseball on the Dixie circuit. Then he eloped and got married last Winter. Now he is a candidate for first base on the Boston Nationals. From the way he goes at things it is evident that as a family man it is up to him to provide for the household. So he wants to make good from the start and be in a position to join the "holdout" league next Winter.

May Be Second Ty Cobb.

He certainly has all the earmarks of a fine ball player. He stopped all sorts of bodily thrown balls and dug up hard grounders, handling everything as sweetly as a Wellesley College girl swallows a caramel. At the bat he much Cobb, Wagner, Lajoie and a few other alleged batsmen look like schoolboys. He was so very good that Stallings wonders when he will blow up.

Little "Rabbit" Maranville who filed in at shortstop toward the close of last season in Boston, was another live wire. His hands work full of nostalgia, and he ate up all sorts of puzzling grounders and covered more ground than Tom O'Shanter his flight from the ghosts of Galloway. There are several candidates for the position of shortstop and the "Rabbit" doesn't want to be headed out. He uses a bat about the size and weight of a policeman's billy, but does good execution on the ball, straight pitching served up by the twirlers at this stage of the game.

Jackson Breaks First Bat.

There were several incidents worth recording, as follows: first man to break a bat, "Hickory" Jackson; first man to be injured, Joe Schultz, the rookie shortstop. A hard grounder took a bad bound and split a thumbnail half in two. He had it bandaged and resumed practice. Great applause.

First man to enter the dining room at a dead heat between the entire team. In this connection it may be said that if the pennant depended on the eating capacity of the eight clubs in the National League, the Pilgrims would never again finish in last place. When the dining room opened the entrance was charged by a solid phalanx of players and there was a grand rush for the tables.

One by one the "holdouts" are yielding up the ghost in order that said ghost may walk. The latest recruit to report is Arthur Bues, who was secured from the Buffalo Club last year. Bues has had his contract for some time but made further demands on the management. These demands were turned down with a scornful laugh.

Cuban Joins Pilgrims

Also there arrived on the scene of action Don. Miguel Gonzales, the Cuban pitcher. In order that there might be no doubt about his pacific intentions, Gonzales took the trouble to cable and cable a friend of his in Athens requesting him to notify Stallings that he had smiled. He donned his uniform with the others today and said he was ready for the word.

Fred V. Smith, brother of Charley Smith, the former Red Sox and Washington pitcher, now with the Cubs at Tampa, arrived from Cleveland to scout the defender. As a semi-pro around Cleveland, he attracted a lot of attention and was highly recommended to Stallings by Bill Bradley, the old Cleveland third baseman.

Stallings received a wire from Catcher Whaling saying he had signed his contract and was making for Athens as fast as trains at this time of year would allow him. He, too, was a holdout. This new rule which makes 'em sign before they can draw their car fare is working finely from the managerial point of view. It is a great way to smoke out the "holdouts."

PIPE DREAMS

THE VETERAN.

I never saw a man who looked
With such a baneful glow
Upon the bush league youth who threw
The pellet to and fro.
As he himself had thrown the pill
In days of long ago
It was not hard to read the look
Upon his sunburnt face,
For he had lost the ancient stuff
To stand the dizzy pace.
You probably would look the same
If you were in his place
Not.

* * *

We see by the papers that the White Sox have been insured for $300,000, which is a high price to place on the head of Ed Walsh.

* * *

Picking a team just now is much like the ancient pastime of pouring water into a sieve.

* * *

These Cuban athletes are not strong in the hitting department, but they are great little runners. All of which shows the value of holding revolutions.

* * *

One of the Cubans labors under the distinguished name of Jesus Clark. "I am a real Clark," he says in a voice that resembles Tim Murphy's.

BUSINESS OF ALARM.

They rise it now with immense alarm,
They'll soon be another tune,
For who will care if a bush league arm
Is sore in the month of June.

* * *

It is as easy to tell a ball player on a plowed field as it is to tell a chess expert from the way he plays football.

* * *

A SOUTHERN NIGHT.

The song of birds, the moonbeams' mellow light,
Have all been sung in wild poetic strains—
But not when freight trains coupled —to all night
And stuffed music through the window pane.

* * *

The report that Luther McCarty has been tearing off yards of conversation in Chicago is another consolation for being down here.

* * *

If Bat Nelson can still knock 'em out, it stands to reason that Jim Sherkard is good for years to come. The only flaw in the argument is that Bat is playing in the minors.

* * *

IN THE SPRING.

They whale the ball, these raw recruits,
They field to beat the band
They make the manager enthuse
By picking liners off their shoes,
And cover miles of land

* * *

But when the Summer rolls around
They join the bush league mob
And in their stead we see once more
The veterans of days of yore
Carorting on the job.

* * *

They get their pictures into print,
Their gedigree and name.
They play like Cobbs in Spring, but still
You cannot tell a player till
The Summer time has came.

Cold Holds Up Red Sox Practice Wood on Job; Collins Still Out

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 4.—When Pitchers "Dutch" Leonard and Grover Brand arrive from California Manager Garland Stahl of the Boston Red Sox will be able to account for all his battery men. He owns four catchers—all members of the 1912 championship team—and twelve pitchers—five old ones and seven juveniles.

"Buck" O'Brien's mother, who was dangerously ill, is now out of danger, and the author of Ye Memorable Balk has notified Manager Stahl that he will start for the Hot Springs camp today. Ray Collins remains a member of the "holdout" club. Joe Wood, Hugh Bedient and Charley Hall are on the job, while five of the rookies are also in camp.

ACCORDING to the local railway officials, Leonard and Brand must have come by way of Richmond, Va., and Portland, Me., from the Coast, as they left Fresno last Thursday and should have reached the Spa twenty-four hours ago. Wood and Thomas comprised Monday's arrivals. With Thomas on deck, Stahl has all four of his catchers in camp.

Clarke's Pirates in the spa's coming big series if his bunch is caught out of condition.

When Joe Wood, the Red Sox most illustrious right hander, registered at the Eastman Hotel, he showed his loyalty towards the fair city of Boston, which made him famous and which is now bent upon making him rich, by writing "Boston" after his own surname. Thomas chose Medicine Lodge, Kans.; Cady, Bishop Hill, Ills.; Young Foster, Bonanza, Ark.; Leslie Nicewander, Aurora, Neb., and Hugh Bedient, Falconer, N. Y., their home towns, but Wood sticks to the sparkling Hub and it goes without saying that its citizens will not object.

Light Work for Squad.

It remains dry in the Spa, but it could be warmer. The best the thermometer will do in midday, the time selected by Stahl to work out his warriors at Majestic Park, is from 53 to 56 degrees. That is not exactly cold weather, but it is a trifle too chilly for Spring baseball work, as even the athletes must be careful not to catch cold in their arms.

Today's training card was the same as yesterday's, to wit: lightest sort of fungo work at Majestic Park, followed by a seven-mile hike over the hills and then a plunge into the hot water. Stahl is in the best of spirits this trip.

A year ago he was more or less morose. But this Spring he is wearing the smile that won't come off rather the smile that C. Mack, H. Jennings, J. Callahan or Clarence at it will have a hard time knocking off.

Speaking of the season's opening, Stahl remarked thusly after breakfast at the Eastman today: "We play something like forty of our first fifty games on the road. Therefore it will be easy. However, that tough schedule means that my players, particularly my pitchers, must be ready."

Edgar Willett at Springs.

To the outsider it looks as if the other American League teams will never see the Red Sox dust the rest of the way if the champs break even in their first fifty battles. Edgar Willett, one of the Tiger pitchers, again wrecked the Bostonians go through their practice séance this morning. He has hopes of Detroit enjoying its usual good season and was glad to read that Stanage and Dubuc were back in the fold.

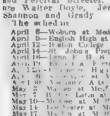
Hedlund Sure to Shine In 2 Mile Title Race

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.
(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)



The eyes of the athletic world will be centered on New York this week for the Indoor National championships, which will take place in Madison Square Garden on Thursday evening, promises to be one of the greatest indoor meetings in the history of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Many of the sport followers of New York are wondering why Hedlund, the fleet mater of the Boston A. A., will not compete in the 1,000-yard event as was advertised by the New York officials. The truth of the matter is that Hedlund never intended to compete in the 1,000-yard run and did not send his entry in for that event.

Hedlund is a National Runner.

Coach John Ryder of the B. A. A. was well aware that if Hedlund competed in the 1,000-yard run he would not have any chance against Kiviat. But in the two-mile event he will have to compete against Scott, Kramer and Harry Smith; besides the wonderful record-breaking athlete from across the Atlantic, Hannes Kolehmainen. The Finn is determined to break the two-mile record, so that from the calibre of the contestants the Uniform runner will have to compete against warrants him an interesting time.

Hedlund has not run a two-mile race for some time, but he has a wonderful constitution and from all indications he will be a strong favorite for second place.

Kiviat is one of the most confident athletes in the world regarding his own ability, but he is undertaking a hard task when he will try to run the 600-yard race and then compete in the 1,000-yard event.

The 600-yard race will be one of the greatest races of the season, for with the same starters who raced in the Suburban Quarter there will be in addition Davenport, Rosedy and Lindberg, the Chicago A. C. whirlwind.

Kiviat Has Equaled Record.

It is true that Kiviat did 1m. 14s. for the distance last year and this time equals the record now held by Gissing and Shepard, but the winner of the 600-yard race next Thursday night will cover the distance in close to 1m. 12s., which is two seconds faster than all previous records.

Kiviat, with his wonderful running ability, may be in the lead when the finish is reached, but if he does he will surprise every athletic authority in the country.

The B. A. A. club will be represented by a wonderful collection of stars in all of the events and will contest every step of the way with the New York A. C. and the Irish-American A. C. Many of the critics are already claiming that the Irish-American club will be the only organization able to cope with the B. A. A.

SAILORS WINNERS IN HARD GAME

The basketball five from the battleship North Carolina defeated the Holy Trinity team at the Shawmut avenue court by 33 to 23 last night. McGeehan played a fast game at forward for the sailors, throwing eight baskets from the floor. The Holy Trinity team was not in shape to play its best game in the fact that the score stood 21 to 21 at the end of the regular forty minutes.

DARTMOUTH MEN ON ALL-STAR FIVE

35 CREW CANDIDATES AT ENGLISH HIGH

English high school's rowing candidates reported yesterday to Assistant Physical Director Fred L. O'Brien, who outlined his plans for the season and told them to be ready to report in good physical condition so as to start work at once. There were thirty-five candidates present.

CANADIAN SEVEN LOSES TO B. A. A.

The B. A. A. hockey team disposed of the Stewartons, 4 to 0, at the Arena last night, and lost another point because the final gong sounded as the puck was on its way into the Canadians' cage.

HARDY IS ELECTED.

Walter Hardy has been chosen captain of the Boston Latin School hockey team for next year. The purple and white had a poor season this past season because of the adverse weather conditions.

Lack of Field Coach Weakens Harvard Team

What is to happen to the Harvard track team without its old veteran head coach, "Bill" Quinn, who died recently, is puzzling the graduate committee of athletics at Cambridge and Captain Cummings also. The temporary arrangement call for the senior members of the team to coach the new candidates, but this cannot last throughout the season, and the final result is difficult to forecast.

T. Cabla, the record-holding shot-putter and hammer thrower, is coaching the weight throwers this week, and will probably continue to do this until a permanent appointment is made. Cummings himself is taking a hand in supervising the sprinters and the middle-distance men, while Lawless and Copeland are managing the mile runners. This will only last while the poorest of the material is being eliminated.

The board track, which has been used in back of Langdell Hall, has been removed to Soldiers' Field, where open-air practice is to begin immediately in order to train the men to run outdoors. The weight throwers are to continue for a while in Hemenway "Gym" with the exception of the hammer throwers, who will work out in back of the lawn school.

Withington has been proposed as temporary coach of the team, but it is hardly to be expected that he will be able to take care of things at this stage of the game. What is more probable, an effort will be made to get one of the B. A. A. men to look after the Harvard freshmen for this season and next year a regular professional, either from some other college or from some professional or semi-professional club, will be hired. Who will come in for this selection is, of course, too far off to be settled yet.

At the same time the unanimous opinion of the undergraduates is to the effect that a winning team will be turned out. The number of veterans on the team and the beautiful showing of the freshmen material combine to give the impression that this season will be a good year for Harvard on the track and in field. The only department in which Harvard is lamentably weak is in the pole vault.

ARRANGE GAMES FOR TECH FRESHMEN

Manager H. C. Thomas of the Technology sophomore baseball team has announced the following dates. The candidates will be called out and a captain elected this week. Practice in the "gym" will be started at once:

April 12—Allen School at West Newton.
April 16—Waltham High at Waltham.
April 23—Technical High at Cambridge.
April 26—Belmont High at Belmont.
May 1—Wentworth Institute at Boston.
May 10—Lawrence Academy at Groton.
May 14—Tech. Prep. at Tech. Field.
May 17—Tech. Freshmen at Tech. Field. In case of a tie with the freshmen a third game will be played.

JIMMY HENNIGAN TO JOIN UNICORN CLUB

James Hennigan of Malden is an applicant for reinstatement in the B. A. A. and will probably be voted on at the next meeting of the board of governors. Hennigan will make quite an addition to the B. A. A. track team, as he has formerly represented the North Dorchester A. A. and in 1911 won the ten-mile championship of the N. E. A. A. U.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its nearest competitor, and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

CREDIT HOUSE
The public readily see the necessity of such a business organization as Boyle Bros., with its great convenience, accommodation and its many benefits and advantages, for with an immense capital invested in the business, the people require little or No Money to trade there, as their credit is freely accepted in exchange for merchandise, without extra charge.
This is the Credit House today of Boyle Bros., who represent this modern method of trading. An account with Boyle Bros. is as good as with any other big, reliable cash store, and just as fashionable, as they most all give credit in some way, but none have so easy a way for the people of limited means, who require greater accommodations than the big stores offer them.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Fashionable Philanthropy

DAISEY MAYME APPLETON was arrayed not only in a new Paris gown and new furs, but in the consciousness that she was doing good in a way that was both select and fashionable.

She ordered her chauffeur to stop his machine before the dingiest of tenements, and then called to the newspaper photographers.

"I have come," she said, "to investigate the condition of the kimono strikers. Please take my picture with a front view so as to give the best effects to my philanthropic expression."

Having thus submitted, much against her will, to a dozen snapshots, Miss Appleton arose to her car. / Waving a muff containing enough fur to cover a dozen shivering shoulders as a signal to the half-frozen, half-starved girls gathered around that she was ready to address them, she began:

"My dears," she said in a voice as sweet as a dinner bell, "I am here to give advice that will help you. In the first place, you misjudge us. You think because we are rich we have no sorrows.

"I came here direct from an open grave," here her voice broke and her tears began to fall. I buried my darling this morning, my life, my all!"

Sobs choked her, but she went bravely on. "I spent thousands of dollars on charges of climate, medical attention, and the daintiest of food, but he was not spared me. Oh, my dear sisters, though I am wealthy, I have my Gethsemane. He was three years old, a Pekinese, and the finest spaniel in the city."

For a moment she was unable to speak. "We rich have other sorrows, too," she continued, "I have had to change maids twice this month, my chauffeur can't speak a word of French and every luncheon I have for the pet I buried this morning was ruined by incompetent service.

"I have come with my sorrow to help you bear yours. Let me suggest that you brace your spirit for the conflict by selecting good reading. Try Robert W. Chambers! He has a way of handling corsets, affinities and soul ambitions in a most delicate manner.

"I have been told that some of you are starving for bread. I will remind you of what the famous French woman said when the peasants cried for bread, 'Why don't they eat cake?' My dear suffering sisters, you will find cake, if it contains plenty of fresh eggs more nutritious than bread."

Then she took her seat, waved good-by with her muff and ordered the chauffeur to drive on.

HOW FORTUNATE!

Mrs. Goode—She is a good nurse, isn't she?

Mrs. Goe—Splendid. Why, I need never see baby from one week's end to the other.

"I am willing," said the candidate, after he had bit the table a terrible blow with his fist, "to trust the people."

The Proposal

As It Really Was and as She Dreamed It

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

She almost shouted "NO" when Billy proposed to her in the restaurant after the theatre, while the cabaret performers were singing and dancing. She would have said "NO" had she not loved Billy so very dearly, and had she not wanted him with her whole heart. The one consolation to her now is that the wedding is to be late in June and they can spend their honeymoon down near the sea.

She loved the sea and the murmur of its waters were to her as the sound of the winds in the pine trees is to the hillsman—and the sight of the breakers rushing onward to the shore were as the uplifting of peaks and the down-dropping of pleasant valleys to the hillborn. There was one favorite cliff of hers that the waves broke upon in creamy spume—and there she always wanted the man of her choice to propose.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

A Strange Physician Is Called in to Treat the Widow. Dr. Haynes Makes a Social Visit

BEATRICE awoke from her faint with a gasp of fright, quickly followed by a sigh of relief when she found that she was in her own bed.

She remembered with a stab of pain that the last time she had fainted Maynard had revived her, and the memory of the look in his eyes brought tears to her own. She pushed from her the hand that was holding a bottle of aromatic salts to her nostrils and coughed feebly, then struggled to rise, but a strong hand detained her. She looked beyond the hand and saw a tall, fair-haired man bending over her. Helen Robbins knelt beside her, gently fanning her, while Mary stood by in helpless distress. Beatrice spoke to her friend in a very uncertain voice.

"Helen," she said, "I am not ill, am I?"

"No, dear," Mrs. Robbins replied cheerfully. "But you are not quite well, that's all."

"I fainted, didn't I?" asked the widow.

"You certainly did," responded Helen. "And so completely, too, that we have had hard work bringing you back. Now you are to lie still."

"But who is that?" persisted Beatrice nodding toward the tall stranger who had withdrawn from the bedside to the window, but who came forward immediately when he heard her question.

A Strange Physician

"I am Dr. Yeager," he said gently, "who happened to be spending a few days at the Cedar Cliff, and for whom Mrs. Robbins sent when she heard of your indisposition. And now you are going to try to go to sleep for a little while. Only Mrs. Robbins will stay here with you."

He motioned to Mary to darken the window, then to follow him from the room. Left alone with her friend, Beatrice felt too weak and drowsy to talk, and, sighing again as she appreciated how comfortable she was, she soon fell into a quiet sleep.

When she awoke the sun was low in the West, and she knew that it was late afternoon. Helen was sitting by the window and came forward as Beatrice called her name.

"Please tell me now all about it," said the invalid.

Her friend smiled. "You must feel better than you did if you are ready to talk."

"Oh, I do—ever so much better."

"Poor child!" sympathized her friend, "you must have over-danced last night!"

"Perhaps I did," said the invalid doubtfully, "but that had nothing to do with my fainting."

"No?" asked Helen quickly. "Then what was the trouble?"

"I don't know," answered Beatrice, on her guard at once. "I just felt queer—and I fainted."

"Keith didn't say or do anything to worry you, did he?" asked Lucy's sister anxiously.

"Indeed, no!" protested Beatrice "What a question to ask! What could he have done?"

"Well, I didn't know," said Mrs. Robbins hesitatingly. "I thought he might have told you he loved you, or something of that kind. You see, he was up here with you, and when you fainted he telephoned in great haste for me and telephoned for the doctor. But I could get nothing out of Keith beyond the fact that you and he were chatting on the veranda and that you suddenly lost consciousness, and that he carried you in and laid you on the bed, after calling Mary to help him."

The Widow's Distress

"I see," said Beatrice; but she offered no further information.

"You must know, of course," Helen continued after a moment's consideration "that Keith is in love with you, Beatrice. And I really am glad that——"

"Oh, Helen," expostulated the widow, with a little wail of distress. "Please don't talk about such things! I hate men! I am positively sick of the sight of them. I don't see why every man who speaks to me should be considered in love with me. I don't want to be admired and courted; I don't want to have men dancing attendance on me any longer. I just want to go back home to Boston to my own little apartment, where I can do as I choose and see whom I please without having everybody talking about it. I'm sick of the country!"

"Well, dear," soothed her friend, distressed at Beatrice's agitation, "you shall go home as soon as you please. You do not have to stay here any longer if you don't want to—for you are bound by no contract. We are going back to the city in a week or two ourselves. The best part of the Summer is over, anyhow, though"—with a sigh—"I had hoped you would like this place."

"Please don't misunderstand me," begged Beatrice. "I do like the place and you have been more than kind to me. I'm not ungrateful, Helen, dear. I'm just homesick—that's all."

"That's all right," agreed Helen Robbins briskly, "and tomorrow you can think about going home. But you must not worry about anything just now. We are going to have a cup of tea here together before you try to get up."

Mary brought the afternoon tea service in, and the friends were still chatting over the teacups when the maid once more knocked at the door.

"If you please, ma'am," she announced, "Dr. Haynes is calling."

"Dr. Haynes!" exclaimed both women in surprise.

"Yes, ma'am, he just come up in his machine and he wants to know if Mrs. Minor can see him."

"Show him into the living room, Mary," ordered Beatrice, starting up with a flush of pleasant excitement. "Helen, won't you go out and talk to him while I dress? I may as well dress for dinner now, anyway. It is so late."

Greeting Dr. Haynes

Fifteen minutes later she appeared in the living room, attired in a white gown. Her eyes were a little weary, but beyond that all traces of her recent attack had disappeared. She gave the physician her hand with a cordial smile of welcome.

"It is good to see you again," she declared. "Had you come a little sooner you might have had to treat me professionally."

"So Mrs. Robbins has been telling me," said Dr. Haynes. "But it is not easy to believe it now they I see you."

"I declare!" exclaimed Helen merrily. "To hear the practical Dr. Haynes paying a compliment is an experience indeed, and one I never had before!"

When the laugh caused by Helen's naïve speech had subsided, the physician explained his presence in Pleasanton.

"I was out for a little run in my machine," he said, "and kept on up the valley into this region, then dropped in at Mrs. Robbins' in the hope of getting an invitation to dine with her and when I heard she was here I followed her—still on the trail of that invitation."

"Good!" said Helen Robbins. "You and Beatrice must both come over to dinner at my house. I'll run along home now, and you come later, Doctor, bringing our ex-invalid in your machine."

Beatrice's face lighted eagerly. "That will be fine," she said, when the man earnestly seconded Helen's suggestion. And, as Mrs. Robbins hurried away, she bade her a merry good-by.

"I am more glad than I can say to see you again," said Dr. Haynes, as he settled down to chat with his fair hostess.

Beatrice smiled and thanked him demurely, but there was in her heart a thrill of happiness that accorded ill with her recent declaration to Helen that she "hated men."

THE BAD SOLDIER

IN one of the barrack rooms in an English post, a soldier, not having much time to dress for guard, had cleaned his boots very well in front, but hardly at all behind. One of his chums, noticing this, said:

"Why don't you clean the backs of your boots, Pat?"

"Oh," said Pat, clapping on his helmet and hurrying out to the parade ground, "a good soldier never looks behind."

In consequence the adjutant awarded Pat three extra parades, and a few days after his chum, seeing a great difference in his boots, remarked: "I thought a good soldier never looked behind, Pat."

"So," replied Pat, "but the adjutant does."

GOLD DUST does more than clean

Gold Dust sterilizes and leaves your kitchen things sanitarily safe. The ordinary soap-washed utensil is not fit to eat from, because soap does not cleanse as thoroughly as it should—does not kill germs of decay which are bound to lurk in oft-used utensils.

Gold Dust does most of the cleaning without your assistance, and does it, too, in a quicker and more thorough manner than will soap or other cleansers.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ASK HIM, OF COURSE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a young man who called on me several times and has taken me out. I learned he was a married man, and later heard he was divorced. Would it be proper for me to meet him and make him explain his conduct, or let it pass and not notice it?

B. SMITH.

IF he is married, you must know it, of course, and accept no more of his attentions. If he has been divorced, that may not be altogether to his discredit, but at least he owes you an explanation if his intentions are at all serious.

DON'T BE SO SURE OF YOURSELF

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I was very friendly with a girl until a year ago, when she turned cool toward me. I have not spoken to her since. I know I am in no way responsible for her act. How can I make up with her? C. C. B.

IN the first place, don't say you know you are not responsible for the trouble. Assume that you are, even if you are not. An attitude of humiliation is always becoming to a man, and most appealing to a woman.

Go to her in this attitude, and ask to be forgiven.

THERE ARE MANY WAYS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

If, while out walking, you meet a man for whom you do not care, and you do not care to walk home with him, please tell how to get rid of him. PERPLEXED.

THE most honorable way would be to tell him you do not want his company, but if you lack the moral courage to do this, you may turn in at some friend's house, or turn back in your own home, or stop the next car that is passing and get on. There are many pretexts you might use, but the best way is to tell him the truth. If he persists, it will finally come to that.

If I ever have those troubles again I will take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JENNIE FERRON, 616 High St., Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin.

Providence, R. I.—"I cannot speak too highly of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it has done wonders for me and I would not be without it. I had organic displacement and bearing down pains and backache and was thoroughly run down when I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helped me and I am in the best of health at present. I work in a factory all day long besides doing my housework so you can see what it has done for me. Stock Prices; Financial News

Stocks were fairly firm when markets opened this being more the case in this city than in New York. Trading was quite active and orders well distributed throughout the list. As in the big American market there was some uncertainty as to the spice trend. Coppers as a class were stronger than railroads and industrials. The copper metal situation remained about the same. In trading in shares prices were moved within a narrow range.

The Boston Stock Exchange seat of Theodore D. Dupee, a member since 1880, is posted for transfer to Volney M. Wilson of Providence. The price paid for the seat was $15,000. Constantine Hutchins has been elected a member of the Exchange, taking the seat of Desman F. Johnson.

New York Prices Were Mixed.

When New York opened traders were somewhat apprehensive as to the market effect of some of the policies advocated in President Wilson's inaugural address and this caused irregularity. The list was mixed as to prices and with gains and losses about equally balanced. The New York market, in fact, reflected the one in London, although irregularity in the latter was the result of different causes. Local labor disputes and the financial needs of nations caused nervousness there. But American stocks were firm. There was not much movement in them. Foreigners waited to read or hear about the inaugural address.

In New York at the opening Canadian Pacific lost 1¾, while Smelters and Steel preferred gained 1. Woolworth dropped, but American Locomotive was firm, advancing ½. Other gains included Westinghouse ¾, Wabash preferred ½, Utah Copper ¾, Steel ¼, Southern Pacific ¼, Reading ¼, Nevada Copper ¼, Pennsylvania ¼, Northern Pacific ¼, Inter-Metropolitan ¾, Inter-Metropolitan preferred ½, Amalgamated ¾, Bethlehem Steel common ¼ and B. R. T. ⅛.

At the end of half an hour the tone was heavy and some of the gains had been lost. Can Pacific was off ⅝, American Can opened unchanged, then lost ¼. The Curb was quiet.

Speculative Interest Was Lacking.

There was a lack of speculative interest in the market, but it is understood that investors are still picking up railroad and industrial stocks which are regarded as bargains at present price levels. Among professional traders, who have been almost all bears for some time, it is admitted that most of the conditions that actuated them in operating have materially improved. They feel that the decline has been so great that the period of depression has lasted so long that it is about time for a reaction. They recognize the force of large increases in railroad earnings and a better demand in Europe for American securities as well as the improvement in the metal situation.

London Copper Metal Market.

In the standard warrants market in London spot and futures opened unchanged. The tone was firm at the start, but later became easier.

The Copper Producers' statement for February will be issued on Friday next.

The Metal Exchange estimates February exportation of copper at 26,767 tons, making 51,793 tons exclusive of Southern and Pacific ports for the first two months of the year, against 66,647 tons in the similar period of last year. This was a decrease of 1,485 tons. Last month's exports were: From New York, 22,630 and from Baltimore, 4,137.

The Ray Consolidated Copper Company's output in February amounted to 4,062,000 pounds.

Paine, Webber & Co. have heard that North Butte has thirty faces of ore before the 2,200 and 2,800 levels that have not yet been touched.

Financial News in Brief.

The Erie road made a new high record in January by doing a business totalling $4,908,700, and in the last fiscal year it earned a balance equivalent to 73 cents per share of common stock, after allowing for 4 per cent. dividends on the first and second preferred issues and charging off $582,400 for additions and betterments. In the seven months of the current fiscal year to the end of January net earnings available for charges and dividends increased $888,500, or 9.73 per cent.

Bethlehem Steel directors will meet about April 1 to take dividend action. This corporation had a profitable year, and it is said "it has been virtually decided by the management to place the preferred stock on a 5 per cent. basis. Unless present plans are changed, a quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. will be declared."

For January the operating revenue of Missouri, Kansas & Texas increased $401,202 and the net $203,976.

International Paper reports for the year ended December 31, 1912: Total revenue, $3,238,359; net, $1,197,678; surplus for year, $740,544. Net is equal to 5.34 per cent. on the preferred stock, as compared with 5.29 per cent. in 1911.

Cambria Steel Company reports for the year ended December 31, 1912: Total income $4,446,709, as against $3,618,333 in 1911; net earnings, $2,941,451, as compared with $3,248,745 in 1911; surplus after dividends, $1,161,083, as against $527,238. The surplus after charges was equal to 7.58 per cent. on the capital stock, as compared with 6.17 per cent. the previous year.

FEAR MAIL CLERK SPREAD SMALLPOX

HARTFORD, Ct., March 4.—The county authorities here fear that letters handled by Andrew J. Conlin, a mail clerk who is ill with smallpox, may have spread the disease. It is reported this city has seven cases of smallpox. Conlin is at the isolation hospital. He is a mail clerk on one of the Boston and New York express trains.

Boston Firemen May Be Shorter if Mayor Agrees

If an amendment just passed by the City Council receives the signature of the Mayor, it will be possible for men five feet six inches tall to join the Fire Department. The present minimum is five feet seven inches.

The Council has also passed an order that the Civil Service Commissioners be requested to keep the fifty-four men who passed under the old requirements on the eligible list for nine months, which is the time they have lost by the adoption of restrictions last Spring. Unless the Commissioners comply, about thirty-one of the fifty-four will be dropped from the list March 16.

Two steel vestibule trains, representing in workmanship and artistic finish the perfection of the car builders' art, have been put into service between Boston and New York. They form the "Merchants' Limited" of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, the 5 o'clock five-hour train between the two cities.

These new trains are practically indestructible; they are built like battleships. They are made of steel, reinforced underneath with two immense steel girders running the length of the car.

Each of the new trains will consist of six cars, exclusive of the diners. There will be four parlor cars, a combination parlor and baggage car, and an observation smoker. All of them have a steel exterior and an interior of inlaid Mexican mahogany. For rich, yet unobtrusive, decoration, they surpass anything heretofore turned out from the Pullman shops.

The usual drawing room has been eliminated in the parlor cars, giving them 36 chairs instead of 28. These chairs, upholstered in tapestry, with self-adjusting backs, are models of their kind.

These cars are the first to have the new, indirect system of lighting. From a dozen bronze lacquered domes, each containing a 100-watt lamp, light is thrown upward against the white ceiling of the car. Thus reflected and diffused, the light has the softness of twilight, and yet the finest print can be read without eye strain.

Each car carries its own lighting system, generated by a dynamo run by a belt from the car axle.

The old system of hot water heating has been discarded for direct steam heating, while drafts are eliminated by the Garland system of ventilation.

The interior finish of the observation smoker, with 40 leather chairs, differs from the others, in that it is of rich cocoa-wood. A buffet, in which hot coffee can be made quickly by electricity, is attached to this car.

The traveller will find himself in surroundings calculated to afford all the relaxation he needs to make his journey between the two cities one of positive pleasure.

WILSON'S LINER 4 DAYS LATE

After being tossed about for days the British tramp steamer Iskum, Captain Thomas Murphy, arrived in port today, four days overdue. The steamer is chartered by the Hamburg-American line and left Hamburg, Germany, on February 14 with a cargo of 5,000 tons of general freight.

When two days out from Hamburg the steamer encountered heavy weather and was soon plowing through seas that constantly broke over her. The storm increased until February 23 when the steamer ran into a hurricane. Three lifeboats were smashed and the saloon and officers' quarters were flooded.

One wave which broke over the ship smashed in the door of the cabin of Boatswain Johannes Boch, flooded the cabin and washed this officer out of his berth before it subsided.

A New President and a New Party in Power

May the Hopes of Many Millions of Voters Be Realized and May Those Chosen to Do the Nation's Important Work Have the Intelligence and the Strength TO DO IT

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

Today sees William Howard Taft leave office and Woodrow Wilson become President of the United States.

The Republicans go, and the Democrats come in.

Nearly half a million American citizens are in Washington to witness the events of the day. And the whole nation looks on, while "Government by the people" turns over a new leaf and begins a new experiment.

Millions of voters who wanted Wilson for President, and other millions divided between Taft, Roosevelt, the Socialist and the Prohibitionist, unite today in good wishes for Woodrow Wilson, his Cabinet and his entire Administration.

In our nation we train carefully for their work nearly all of those that have important work to do.

The lawyer, the doctor, the carpenter, the bricklayer, the telegrapher, the telephone girl and the messenger boy are all trained carefully in advance for the work entrusted to them.

We select our President, and he selects the members of the Cabinet at random. Today the President may be a lawyer, tomorrow a professor, next day a soldier, covered with the glory of the moment.

The greatest things in our country, the power to veto laws, management of the great departments of the United States, from the Postoffice, up and down, are given to men regardless of any special training.

But, life in the United States for the intelligent man is ITSELF a training in government.

And on the whole, the country has done well on the basis of training men for the LITTLE work, and picking them at random, according to the mood of the people and the accident of politics—FOR THE GREAT WORK.

The people have in Mr. Wilson a man of thorough education, of wide information, and unquestionably of great will power.

He and his associates have an opportunity that no other body of men on this earth possess.

The President of the United States is more powerful, although he is hired by the citizens of a republic, than any constitutional monarch of Europe.

The King of England, the Emperor of Germany do not begin to possess the individual power that our Constitution and the customs that we have built up inside of our Constitution PLACE IN THE HANDS OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

May he do all the things that his warmest admirers hope for, and none of the things that those who opposed him feared he would do.

The best of usefulness and all success to him and to the men whom he will gather about him, to share in the management of the greatest experiment in free government that the world has ever seen.

The AMERICAN Wishes Our Retiring Junior Senator a Prosperous Career—in Everything That Does Not Conflict With the Public Interest.

United States Senator Winthrop Murray Crane retires today voluntarily from the Senate, where for a number of years he has been recognized as one of the most important factors of our national government.

Mr. Crane is an arch conservative. He represented in the Senate that tendency in our country's affairs which the AMERICAN believes will, if not arrested, destroy the virility of a democratic republic, substituting under the forms of a republic, first a recognized plutocracy and then destroying even the FORMS of the republic itself.

Like conditions produce like results, and history repeats itself. When we see year after year the country drifting into the same economic and social and political conditions which destroyed the ancient republics and democracies, we may well beware of what happened in the ancient world.

But there is no doubt that Senator Crane HONESTLY BELIEVES that the country is doing well and that we had better let well enough alone. He sincerely believes that big business ought to control the country. He sees our population growing. He sees our aggregate wealth growing. He measures our prosperity and political health by the accumulation of AGGREGATE wealth and power.

Other men who are more free from Mr. Crane's environment, measure the prosperity and health of the country more by the DISTRIBUTION of wealth and power than by its mere ACCUMULATION, though it be more and more in the hands of a few.

A newspaper with the views which the AMERICAN entertains, must oppose the political principles of Mr. Crane. But we can and do join with his political friends in believing that he acts according to his light.

THE AMERICAN WISHES MR. CRANE A LONG AND PROSPEROUS CAREER IN EVERYTHING THAT DOES NOT CONFLICT WITH THE PUBLIC INTEREST.

With Woodrow Wilson taking the oath of office and the whole nation looking on, it is easy to believe that great men who have preceded him and made his office what it is are with the people in spirit on this day

Heroism of Woman Is Greater Than That of Man, for It Is More Often Self-Sacrificing

Man Is Brave in the Delirium of Conflict, but Woman's Courage Is the Open-Eyed Sort Which Enables Her to Bear Weeks of Agony, Suspense and Fear with Fortitude

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

We are hearing a great deal about heroes nowadays.

Whenever war breaks out, hero worship is in the air. Many people seem to think that there are no real heroes except those of the battlefield.

What is true heroism? It is self-sacrifice. And in this woman is greater than man. Men have written the history of the world, and they have magnified the heroes at the expense of the heroines. Woman never tried to write history. She leaves her deeds to speak for themselves. Even a hero does not write about himself, if he is a real one.

Pages have been printed within the last four weeks about the heroism displayed in the Balkan war. There has been plenty of it, but the writing has all been about the heroes. Who has heard a word about the heroines?

This War Has Produced More Brave Women Than Heroes

If the true history of this war were known, it would be found that it has brought forth more heroines than heroes. It is not merely the man who goes to the front with a gun in his hand who is heroic. It is relatively easy to be a hero amid the sound of drums, under the inspiration of fluttering flags, with the maddening battle-smoke making the spirit drunk.

It is not so easy to stay at home, struggling alone for a living, with mind and heart torn by fear, anxiety and haunting doubt. The woman who sees her husband and sons march away to the war, leaving her at home to care for the children and to bear the suspense, has need of greater fortitude than those who charge the batteries possess. Their heroism becomes that of delirium—wild, ungovernable, blind; her heroism is open-eyed, with no mad enthusiasm to conceal the danger and the horror.

What does history tell us, even as men have written it? Did Abraham do anything heroic? But consider his wife, Sarai. Is there a more heroic action on record than hers when she gave her handmaiden, Hagar, to him for a wife? It was pure self-sacrifice, far harder and far nobler than to rush, in the fury of battle, upon an enemy's guns. Life is not the only precious thing in the world, nor the most precious.

Was Napoleon more heroic when he led the charge at Dresden to save his empire than Josephine was when she bowed, with bitter tears, yet uncomplaining, to the decree that separated her from the man she loved, and for whom she had first opened the gates of opportunity? Measured by any just standard, was his heroism equal to hers?

Even in War Woman Has Surpassed Man in Moral Force

Even on man's own field—that of war—he has been surpassed by woman in moral force. Read the story of Florence Nightingale in the Crimea. Read that of Clara Barton in the Army of the Potomac and in the Franco-German war. Read, in scattered records, what women did in our great struggle between the States. Recall the story of Flora Macdonald and her sacrifices for an unworthy pretender to the throne of England. And, finally, read the history of Joan of Arc. There you see what true heroism means.

When woman visits the scenes of war she goes with her whole soul in revolt. She is not blinded by "glory," she is led only by a sense of duty, of pity, of mercy, of compassion. That she can go at all is a proof of moral strength exceeding man's for he goes led by a glamour that never dazzles her eyes.

Look nearer home. Many of you have seen women march through our streets for equality of rights. Did you reflect what that meant for many of them? Did you consider that the jeers of thoughtless bystanders were for those women, sacrificing their native modesty for the sake of a great cause, worse than bullets and bursting shrapnel? For they wounded more than flesh and bones—they wounded the soul! Did the courage and the heroism of their act make no appeal to you? If it did not, you do not comprehend woman, and you do not understand what true heroism is.

It Is Woman Who Leads Way to Real Glory in This World

It is woman who points and leads the way to real glory in this world. When her reign comes, and only then, will the nations learn to make war no more. But heroism will not cease; its inmost nature will then first become manifest to all. Then we shall clearly perceive what the moral excellence of woman has done for the world, and our ambition will set a higher aim for itself. But while war continues to rage, and man's ideal of glory to prevail, the deeper heroism of woman will always strengthen him. He feels it, though he may not comprehend it.

The editor of this newspaper has clearly pointed out the fatal defect of the Turk who has been driven like a whipped dog before the Bulgars, the Serbs and the Greeks, because he has trodden under his feet the moral influence of woman, while his foes have been sustained by it. There could be no plainer demonstration of the fact that the source of true heroism is in the hearts of women.

TO PRESIDENT WILSON

By EDWARD PORTER

March 4, 1913

On this great day for all who would be free
From servile homage to the Powers-that-Prey,
You, who have studied deep and written well
Of him who guided first our Ship of State,
Know you need all his ceaseless zeal and valor
To steer it back from out the troublous seas
Back to the Port of Freedom.

The times have changed; but men have changed
In outward seeming only; at heart they are akin
To those who helped and hindered Washington.
It is not most the Pirates who beset
The Ship of State that menace its safe passage,
Nor yet the rocks of Fear and Ignorance;
'Tis more than all the Good Ship's company
In whom its safety rests.

No place is it for sloths, for mutineers,
Or for a motley crew enrolled by Patronage,
Striving for self or those who keep 'em there.
Like the new Master of the Ship of State,
If it's to anchor in the Port o' Freedom,
His comrades, great and small, must be
Faithful to those who keep the Craft afloat:
The People, who are very apt forget

Optimism—The Man Who Hopes for Better Things Without Working to Produce Them Is of Little Use to World.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

One hears a great deal about optimism.

The dictionary tells us an optimist is one who believes that everything is ordered for the best, and that all things are working together for good in the universe.

But many people may be encountered who call themselves optimists unwisely. Hopefulness is an excellent quality. Yet hopefulness without common sense or reason to give it balance may be a man's ruin.

I recall a man who was always optimistic about his farm. He expected good results each year, and when others shook their heads over drought or flood or sterile soil, he looked upon the bright side and planned what he would do with the wonderful yield he knew was to be his.

NOW Is the Only Time to Begin Doing Great Things.

Meanwhile he idled away his time, let his land run to weeds and was always the last one to sow his seed or gather his crops.

He was forever in debt and the farm added mortgage to mortgage. That is the kind of optimism which would do well to change its nature and become "worry." For the worrying farmer would at least plough his soil and sow his seed and gather his crops in season, for fear of disaster.

I know a young woman who is always "going to do" wonderful things. She has a beautiful voice and money to cultivate it, and she is "going to make a singer" some of these days. That is what she tells her friends, with hope and ambition in her eyes. But she lets the weeks and months slip into years and never takes a lesson. When spoken to upon the subject she smiles brightly and says she has been so busy she could not get around to music lessons, but that they are sure to come in time.

She does not realize that there is no time but NOW.

What has been, or what is to be, is not.

Only NOW is.

If you have a talent or an object of any kind in view, unless you are doing something toward its perfection today you have no right to be optimistic.

If you are doing slipshod or careless work, or letting things go, taking the optimistic view that they are sure to come out all right because everything is for the best in the world, then you are building houses of sand, and the waves of time will destroy them for you.

You are worse than the philosophical pessimist who declares everything is going to the dogs, yet who makes the most of each day as it passes. To deserve the name of optimist and to reap the benefits which optimism surely brings we must lay our foundation in thought and build on its works.

The Optimist Knows the Universe Rests Upon the Shoulders of Love.

We may imagine the upper stories of our mansions before we build them, but we must not attempt to occupy them until they are solid facts.

Many people mistake egotism and conceit for optimism.

They expect their most absurd project to succeed because it is theirs. Self-esteem is an excellent quality, but a certain humility of spirit is a becoming garment wherewith to clothe this esteem. The true optimist is humble of spirit. He knows himself to be a part of the universe, and he knows the universe rests upon the shoulders of love. But he realizes the necessity for each atom of the universe to do its appointed part, just as each portion of a machine has its importance in the perfection of the whole.

That all things will work out eventually for good he knows, but he must help to bring the result.

Optimistic thoughts are great powers for success, but, like faith, they are dead without works.

Every day we hear people saying that the world will outgrow war. That is the optimistic view to take, but when we see those same people rushing to gape at and do honor to a war hero and pouring over details of bloody battles, we cannot help wondering just what part they are taking in the world's evolution toward peace.

I know a good churchman who prays for "peace and good will to all men," yet when he felt a business man had overcharged him to the extent of $2, he declared he would "go even with him" and make that overcharge cost him dear. There was war in his heart, his voice and his face as he said it.

How can we expect the world to grow better and kinder unless we ourselves grow in those directions. How can we fling from the lips meaningless optimism and go forth and belie our words by what we do?

"By their works ye shall know them."
